—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WHAT DOES the world need, with a poor year fading away and a new one of uncertainty coming?

William T. Dewart says it needs "devotion," a word used probably as a synonym for concentration. But concentration on WHAT?

RUSSIA SAYS the world needs universal revolution. Other nations will be more interested in that when they find how Russia thrives with her revolution.

Many good people say the world needs universal peace, that would make everything perfect. Japan thinks not. Europe thought not a few years ago.

THE AVERAGE American says the world's great need is more money. But there is plenty of money and plenty of goods of all kinds. The problem is distribution.

Six or eight millions of us say the only need is a job.

UNDERLYING ALL our troubles, is some one thing that, if attended to, would solve our problems of agriculture, industry and finance.

But we are a nation of specialists, in business and everything and no one is able to see the situation as a whole.

To remedy one trouble, taxes are proposed that would make other troubles worse. Each sees only his little corner. We are like so many flies, wandering over a big oil painting, none of us able to see the entire picture.

A BANK badly started, stupidly managed, was allowed to call itself "The Bank of United States." This convinced ignorant depositors that the bank had some national connection or guarantee, and they flocked to it.

The bank failed, and but for the energetic fight of one lawyer, Max D. Steuer, who filled certain rascals with fear of prison, all might have been lost.

BUT, AS IT turns out, if you had put all your money in that bank when it opened, and your friend had put all his in the highest grade "blue chip" stocks, you would be better off now than he. For you won't get back 60 per cent of your money, and he would have 30 per cent or less of his remaining.

MR. LENZ, playing against Mr. Culbertson, for the contract bridge championship, rests for a day and plays chess.

It is a wise kind of rest, since chess, presenting problems unlike those of bridge, calls on other mental powers.

Darwin, in the evening, read fairy stories as a rest from his profound research.

You read, in Genesis, that the Lord, having created everything in six days, rested on the seventh. But you may be sure his rest was not inactivity.

What we need is change of effort, not cessation of activity.

CHARLES E. MITCHELL, head of New York's National City Bank, described Germany's youth, faced by three generations of hopeless financial slavery.

"In Germany, today, young men are going into the universities who were not born when the Great War started. And not only they, but their progeny, and the progeny of their progeny, must pay, for three generations, a debt for which they, as individuals, were not responsible."

Mr. Mitchell adds:

"My impression is that there is going to be a rebellion against the paying of the money."

IT IS COMFORTING to know that this nation is not responsible for Germany's plight. It is not to us that Germany must pay reparations, hundreds of millions a year, for more than 60 years. We did not start the war, and we do not get the money.

That Germany will NOT continue paying for more than half a century is certain. She will fight her way out of bondage, or abandon, in despair, an impossible task.

Then will come our turn to pay, as usual. France and Britain will tell us:

"Sorry, but since Germany will not pay US, we cannot pay YOU."

H. J. ALLEN, former Governor of Kansas, is afraid Germany will abandon the gold standard, with France forced to do likewise, and even this country obliged to give up gold. He says:

"France can teach us things about a high tariff wall that Smoot never dreamed of."

He sees danger in bimetallism, and says:

"Next summer we shall be talking about bimetallism, and the free and unlimited coinage of silver at any ratio that will enable us to have cheap money."

THAT IS a terrible picture, for those that still believe in the golden calf. But we need not abandon that precious animal. We have the gold, twice as much as any other nation, nearly half of the total supply on earth.

Why not keep it, and even add to it, absolutely forbidding gold exports? No one could say we had abandoned the gold standard if we owned all the available gold. You could not say that Mr. Rockefeller had abandoned the wealth standard, if he could prove that he had five hundred millions in bank.

Why should we worry? We HAVE the gold, and money to

MISSING GIRL FOUND DAZED IN HOTEL

Details of Movements for Three Days Unknown; Ill From Studies, Says Father

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Dazed, and reported to be in a condition barring interviews, Virginia Penfield, Columbus (O.) heiress, is at the Naragansett Hotel in this city.

Providence police, who knew nothing of the girl's presence until informed by newspapermen working on Associated Press dispatches from Philadelphia, have interviewed the management of the hotel, but the result of their investigation has not been forthcoming yet.

The manager of the hotel said he had been ordered "to give out no information."

BREAK INTO ROOM

It was learned at the hotel that the girl arrived last night. When a maid attempted to enter her room this morning, the door was locked and the occupant could not be aroused. Entrance was gained through a window.

Hotel authorities looked through papers in the girl's possession which bore her name and compared published pictures. They decided identification was complete and notified her father. The girl registered under the name of B. Brown.

Chief Inspector John Kelly, of the Providence police force, after interviewing her, said she had been here before.

ILL, FATHER TOLD

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Miss Virginia Penfield, missing 19-year-old schoolgirl, who disappeared here on Thursday, was found today at the Naragansett Hotel in Providence, R. I. Her father, Clare J. Penfield, was informed she arrived there in a daze and ill.

She arrived there yesterday. She was able to tell her own name, but could not remember her

Girl Slain, Senator's Adopted Son Sought

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Thomas Peebles, nephew and adopted son of former State Senator John M. Powell, was sought by police today as the slayer of Cenetta Mang, 16-year-old "party girl," killed during a drinking party in the Powell home when she sought to stop a fight between Peebles and another guest, John Rhodes.

Miss Mang was trying to wrest a revolver from Peebles' hand when the fatal bullet entered her body.

Hoover Loses Sleuths, Unguarded on Ride

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The most constantly watched man got away yesterday for an unguarded spin on the Maryland highways and byways.

Woman Falls Dead On Busy Street

In view of scores of pedestrians, Mrs. Mary Besenyi, 55, a widow, of 432 Fourth avenue, Homestead, fell dead at Sixth street and Penn avenue, shortly before noon today. At Allegheny General Hospital death was attributed to a heart attack. Mrs. Besenyi was Christmas shopping.

REVENGE HINT IN KIDNAPING

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—A new theory, "revenge," today entered the Marian McLean kidnaping case.

Although separated, both parents of the missing 6-year old girl, said Joseph McLean, the father, now living in Phoenix, Ariz., had been threatened by a man for alleged attentions paid to the latter's wife.

The child's mother, Mrs. Mildred McLean, revealed she wrote her estranged husband last October that his life had been threatened. She said:

"A man and a woman told me to warn him that a man was gunning for him. I was told that the man had accused my husband of associating with his wife."

Dispatches from Phoenix quoted McLean saying he believed "some one might have had a grudge against me."

Boy Scout executives offered services of 4,000 Scouts to search the slum districts, abandoned buildings and county highways for a trace of the girl, missing almost four days. She last was seen accompanying a tall, dark, slender stranger down an alley near her tenement home.

GIRL CUT, HOLD MOTHER OF 5

GREENSBURG, Pa., Dec. 21.—A middle aged woman's jealousy, state police said today, was the motive for the probable fatal stabbing of a 17-year-old girl last night.

Mrs. Anna Guick, 30, mother of five, taken from her home in Latrobe early today, was grilled by state police, as Eleanor Rizziadia, 17, of Claridge, battled for her life in Westmoreland Hospital. The girl was stabbed as she walked along the Claridge-Harrison City road last night with two companions. A woman alighted from a passing auto and after a few words with the girl, stabbed her, re-entered the auto and fled.

Three hours later police arrested Mrs. Guick. Police said the woman was friendly with a man who presumably had shown attentions to the girl. The identity of the man was not disclosed.

Yule Decorations Burned Downtown

The first Christmas blaze broke out early today when holiday decorations on the West Penn Power Building at Wood street and First avenue were caught by flames. Wiring in a Christmas star which was part of the decorations, was believed by police to be responsible for the fire, which was not of serious proportions.

Churchill Quits New York Hospital

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—His face still patched with white strips of adhesive plaster, Winston Churchill, injured British statesman, was today taken in wheel chair and automobile to his hotel from the hospital in which he had spent eight days as a result of being knocked down by a taxicab.

PRESIDENT ASSAILED IN SENATE

Johnson Scores Hoover for Use of 'Lash' to Force Through Moratorium Plan

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—The administration was rushing the Hoover debt moratorium through the Senate today in the face of protests against a presidential "lash."

Senator Johnson (Rep.), of California, charged the administration, by threatening night sessions of the Senate, was trying to use force to saddle $250,000,000 of Europe's debts on the back of American taxpayers. He protested against the administration's efforts to jam through the moratorium before Congress goes home for its annual Christmas recess.

FURIOUS DEBATE

Formal but furious debate was opened after a Senate committee investigating the flotation of foreign debts had heard Otto Kahn, international banker, testify that he believed German private debts would be paid, but refuse to make a forecast on reparations.

In the battle on the Senate floor, Senator Norris (Rep.), of Nebraska, joined Johnson, charging the President's action in pledging Congress to the moratorium was unconstitutional and illegal.

Johnson aroused the galleries with his protest against "saddling the debts of Europe on American taxpayers." He declared:

"We are going to put on the backs of American taxpayers $250,000,000 of Europe's debts, and we are to be held all night until we approve it. We are going to be lashed by those who want to take Europe's debts and put them on America. We are going to be lashed into physical exhaustion. To that I object.

"No filibuster do I wish and none shall I indulge in, but I

Hit-Run Suspects Taken After Chase

Following a chase over several city blocks, police in a radio cruiser early today arrested an alleged hit-run driver and his companion. The two men, William Greco, 27, of 310 Ellers street, who police say was the driver, and Krank Sucaroro, 24, of 50 Lawn street, were lodged in Hazelwood Police Station on suspicious person charges.

Irwin Englert, 20, of 457 Mansion street, struck while crossing Second avenue near Elizabeth street, was taken to Mercy Hospital, suffering a probable brain concussion.

Baby Dies After Swallowing Popcorn

A battle to save the life of Eugene W. Woods, 2, of East Palestine, O., who choked on a piece of popcorn, ended last night in the Eye and Ear Hospital, when the child died. The baby was hurried here a week ago by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond M. Woods.

A death certificate issued by the hospital was held up by the Bureau of Health and the case referred to the Coroner for investigation.

Yule Garb Ignites; 1 Boy Dies, 5 Burned

LOHNE, Germany, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Six boys, dressed in cotton-wool as snow men in a holiday play, caught fire today from a Christmas tree and were unable to gain the exit. One was burned to death and the others were seriously injured.

Congress Must Not Give Away 10 Thousand Millions Of U.S. Money--W.R. Hearst

Gentlemen of the Congress of the United States:

Senator Johnson is right.

Do not be in a hurry to give away ten thousand million dollars of the American people's money.

In this case, you cannot ever get it back.

You have already given away or forgiven away five thousand million dollars of the American people's money.

Just try to get any of THAT back.

All you got in exchange for this former benefaction was ill will and ridicule.

All you will get in return for any further benefaction will be further resentment plus contempt.

The London Herald, organ of the British administration, says:

Perhaps the American people are not, but their representatives are.

Ramsay MacDonald in a public speech asked for re-election on the grounds that he had "cancelled the debt" through the moratorium.

Every statesman in Europe says that if the European nations once stop paying the United States THEY WILL NEVER BEGIN AGAIN.

If you pass Mr. Hoover's personal moratorium, you are giving these European nations the opportunity to stop paying their debts.

You are giving away ten thousand million dollars of the American people's money.

You are putting the whole burden of this European war on the American people, who are already staggering under half the burden.

Do not give away ten thousand million dollars of the American people's money.

It is not YOUR money, but you are the TRUSTEES of the people's money, and as honorable men you feel deeply the obligation of a trust.

Do not be reckless with trust funds.

Furthermore, in justice to your country and your clients and your patriotic fathers, do not encourage irresponsible acts on the part of the executive, your equal, not your RULER.

Do not encourage unconstitutional performances, and create unconstitutional precedents.

Do not encourage an un-American, unconstitutional dictatorship.

Exercise the rights and the OBLIGATIONS the founders of this American republic conferred upon you.

Exercise the independence, the equality, which the Constitution gives you.

Be true to the trust the American people repose in you.

Be one of the co-equal branches of the American government.

Do not be more weakly subservient to tyranny than your fathers were.

Do not allow yourselves to be disciplined by having your postmasters taken away from you.

Glory in the honor of being the DIRECT representatives of the people of the United States.

Be faithful to this great trust.

Do not make a "scrap of paper" out of the Constitution, and do not give ten thousand million dollars of the American people's money away.

LAND RATE REDUCED TO 2.3 CENTS

Millage on Buildings Pared To 11½; Payroll to Be Pruned to Meet Budget

The city tax rate will be lower in 1932 by 2½ mills on land and 1¼ mils on buildings, Council agreed unanimously today.

Next year's levy will be 23 mills on land and 11½ mills on buildings, compared with 25½ mills and 12¾ mills for the current year.

Councilman Robert Garland championed a cut of 3 mills but withdrew his motion and voted with the others with the understanding that Council take a hand in controlling expeditures.

PAYROLL WARNED

Councilman W. Y. English, chairman of the Budget Committee, warned that Council would eliminate all dead wood from the payroll and oust any ward chairman holding sinecures.

Taking a slap at the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board and the Building Owners and Managers Association which had advocated a 5-mill cut in the tax rate, English declared:

"Why don't they do something about cutting the school and county taxes? We can all make heroes of ourselves by adopting the building owners' proposal for a 5-mill reduction but that would result in chaos.

"I am willing to pledge myself to half that amount. Council can be depended upon to eliminate dead wood from the payroll. If there happens to be a ward chairman in a job whose services are not needed, he must go."

VOTE UNANIMOUS

President John S. Herron moved to cut the tax rate in accordance with English's views. Councilman Harry A. Little seconded the motion and it was passed without a dissenting vote.

SCAN CITY CASH LINK TO LOANS

Investigation of Roy D. Schooley's administration as City Treasurer today turned to efforts to learn whether reported loans exceeding $200,000 by the closed Franklin Savings and Trust Company to politicians were in any way linked with city deposits in that bank. Prominent figures who may be able to tell will be subpenaed today to appear before the grand jury.

Under subpena to discuss the bank's connection with the city are Charles A. Bardolph, president of the bank, and Herman Frieidman, Kline faction political leader.

Meanwhile, District Attorney Andrew T. Park planned today to continue an investigation into the report that a shortage existed in the accounts of the Board of Public Education while Schooley was City and School Treasurer.

A partial report of the audit of the City Treasurer's records revealed that a part of the $3,000 admittedly embezzled by Charles Solomon, former aide to Schooley, was school funds.

Scot Prefers Yule in Jail To Paying $1.87 Fine

GLASGOW, Scotland, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Christmas is a merry holiday, and it would not be so nice to spend it in jail.

But 10 shillings (about $1.87) is a lot of money, and here's one Scotsman who would rather spend Christmas in jail than pay a 10 shilling fine.

He is John McGovern, Laborite member of Parliament, who was arrested for violating a public speaking ordinance. He choose a short jail term, which will keep him imprisoned until after the holidays, to paying the fine.

W. L. MELLON'S 'RETIREMENT' FAILS TO UNITE COUNTY G. O. P.

CHAIRMANSHIP CONTINUES MUDDLED

Conditional Indorsement of Mansfield by Coyne Held Move by Ex-State Leader

By MARK SHIELDS

Declaration by W. L. Mellon that he now is "not actively in politics, nor am I taking any part in the promotion of candidates," has had little apparent effect in clarifying the controversy over whom Allegheny County Republicans shall select as county chairman to succeed the late Joseph G. Armstrong.

Mellon's statement today was cognizance of recent reports that he first sought backing for Senator James J. Coyne for the post, and when that suggestion ran into difficulties he turned to Boyd Euwer, former treasurer of the party. It is understood to have been issued without recent conferences between Mellon and his two uncles R. B. Mellon and Secretary of the Treasury A. W. Mellon.

STILL INTERESTED

First reactions of politicians today was that the Mellon statement would not be taken as a complete severance of support for a chairmanship candidate and that his influence still would be felt through Coyne, his chief political adviser since the death of Armstrong. In this connection significance was attached to Coyne's conditional indorsement of Senator William D. Mansfield, County Commissioner-elect, for local party leadership.

Mansfield is close to F. B. Crawford, of McKeesport, whose support Mellon sought last week for Coyne, but failed to get. Coyne and Mansfield, never political cronies, were drawn into a common cause in the last election when Coyne supported Mansfield and David L. Lawrence, Democrat, for two of the three Commissioner posts. This bi-partisan arrangement is generally understood to have been fully, though not publicly, supported by Mansfield, as evidenced by the sizeable vote given Lawrence in McKeesport, Mansfield's home, and other sections where the Senator had influence.

MANSFIELD STRONGER

Mansfield would not encounter the same objections raised by Independent Republicans against Coyne and Euwer. It is not figured that County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, and Commissioner-elect C. M. Barr, regarded as the majority members, would thus early seek a battle with their coming associate.

Upon more than one occasion Mansfield has been out of sympathy with Mellon undertakings, siding with Gov. Pinchot, but there are evidences that he is becoming more conservative, and through relationship with Crawford would not, as chairman, seriously jeopardize important issues in which Mellon, as a citizen of Pittsburgh, naturally is "deeply interested," as he said in his statement.

Reluctance of Clerk of Courts S. J. Topley and Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell to seek the chairmanship has hampered groups opposed to Coyne and smooths the path of Mansfield. Both county officials have been firm friends of the Senator.

The Mellon statement follows:

"Notwithstanding the fact that I retired three years ago as chairman of the Republican State Committee and ceased active participation in politics, there appears to be a persistent effort to indicate that I am still attempting to select candidates for public office and outline political policies. As a citizen of Pittsburgh, naturally I am deeply interested in its welfare, but I am not actively in politics, nor am I taking any part in the promotion of candidates."

MISSING GIRL IS RECOVERED

father's first name, authorities at the Naragansett House informed Horace L. Wiggins, manager of the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, where the girl's father, Clare J. Penfield, had been directing the hunt for her.

IDENTIFIED BY CHECKS

A few minutes after word she had been found was received here her father was on his way by automobile to a local airport, where he intended to engage a plane for a flight to Providence.

The young woman, a student at the Mary Lyon School at Swarthmore, Pa., had been positively identified, Mr. Wiggins was informed, by travelers checks she carried.

Details as to where the young woman has spent the three days since she disappeared at 3:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon were not available, but the fact she was ill confirmed, the father said, his beliefe that she had suffered from over-study.

LAUDS NEWSPAPERS

Penfield was so overcome with joy that for a few seconds he was unable to speak. He sat in a chair in his hotel suite, in the midst of a group of detectives, newspapermen and hotel attendants, and buried his head in his hands. Then he said:

"There are not enough words in the English language to express my feeling of appreciation for the assistance given by newspapers, the police and all others who aided in the search."

After the father had decided to take an airplane to Providence, he was informed by the Camden (N. J.) airport that foggy conditions this afternoon made it impossible to take him there by air. He then decided to go on the first train out of Philadelphia.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Virginia Penfield, who disappeared in Philadelphia last Thursday, has been located at the Naragansett Hotel in Providence, R. I., according to a telephone report to the Penfield home here this afternoon.

The call was made by a Dr. Brown, who said that the girl had been suffering from a loss of memory.

Mrs. Penfield, overwrought from fear and worry over her daughter's fate, was reluctant to believe the report that Virginia had been found. She asked, repeatedly:

"Are you sure? Are you sure?"

Assured that the identification was positive, the mother became almost speechless with joy. Other members of the family who have kept up a tireless vigil at the luxurious Penfield home were elated at the news.

buy more, and we PRODUCE the silver.

We have everything, our only trouble being that we do not know how to use and enjoy what we have.

MR. FORBES, our ambassador in Tokio, is still muttering advice to Japan:

"Please get out of Manchuria."

The League of Nations seems to have, temporarily, stopped its muttering, along similar lines, being able to take a hint.

It is a broad hint. Japan, told by our government and the league to quit Manchuria at once, now says to China:

"YOU get out of Manchuria, not later than December 25, or I shall put you out."

Japan classes the league and ourselves with barking dogs that will not bite, and that view is sound. Why do we make ourselves ridiculous?

MELLON 'PAPER DEFICIT' SEEN

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Congressman Wright Patman, of Texas, speaking to 2,000 World War veterans at a mass meeting here last night in favor of payment to veterans of the balances on their adjusted compensation certificates, declared that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has created a "paper deficit" and that the government is in position to pay the additional compensation to the veterans. He said:

"I have studied the needs of the ex-service man and the ability of the government to pay, and I tell you that the government can do it without serious effect. We are not unpatriotic nor 'bonus racketeers' when we seek this money.

"The paper deficit has been created by Secretary Mellon by premature debt reductions and the suspension of debt payments from foreign countries under the moratorium arrangement."

Depositors Reopen Closed W. Va. Bank

FAIRVIEW, W. Va., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The Farmers and Merchants Bank here reopened today under terms of agreement among depositors. The bank, which was solvent, closed its doors two months ago to protect its depositors. Virtually all of the depositors since have signed an agreement to leave their funds in the bank from 12 to 24 months, making withdrawals according to terms of the pact.

Non-depositors will not be bound by the agreement.

CABINET QUITS IN AUSTRALIA

Sir Isaac Isaacs, the governor-general, immediately summoned Joseph A. Lyons, who was slated to be premier as a result of the anti-Labor victory, to go to Canberra, the capital, and form a new ministry.

As the defeat of the Labor party became a certainty, prices immediately reacted in an upward trend on the stock exchanges. Opposition leaders predicted an almost immediate restoration of faith in Australian investments, which slumped decidedly with the Labor party.

Mrs. Tunney's Sister Files Divorce Action

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Mrs. Katherine V. Lauder Dewing, sister of Mrs. Polly Lauder Tunney, today filed suit for divorce from the socially prominent Edwin Stores Dewing, member of a brokerage firm which collapsed recently.

Mrs. Dewing was said to have gone for a visit to her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James J. (Gene) Tunney, in New York.

JAPANESE ARMY ROUTS CHINESE IN BATTLE

By JAMES R. YOUNG
International News Service.

TOKIO, Dec. 21.—Large forces of Chinese irregulars fled precipitately as the Japanese army launched its great anti-bandit drive in Manchuria today.

After attempting a stand at several points, the Chinese suddenly broke off the fighting and abandoned the battlefield, retreating in great disorder.

No attempt was made by the Japanese troops to pursue the fleeing bandits, who abandoned guns and ammunition as they retreated across the snowy plains.

At Changtu, where air pilots had reported a concentration of about 7,000 Chinese irregulars, the Japanese advance detachments found a few hundred men who were quickly dispersed. The main Chinese force had withdrawn when airplanes reported the approach of the Nipponese army.

Reports from Mukden at midnight tonight said but few prisoners had been taken.

KANE TO STUDY IN SPAIN

KANE, Pa., Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Dr. Elisha Kent Kane, former professor at the University of Tennessee, recently acquitted after a dramatic court trial of the drowning of his wife, today denied reports that he had been offered a position in a Spanish university.

He said, however, that he plans soon to travel to Spain, there to continue his studies of the romance languages at the University of Madrid. He said:

"My plans are still nebulous. I will spend the holidays in Kane and then will go to New York. After that, I intend to go to Spain."

He revealed that his newest book, a translation of a romantic Spanish novel, was complete with the exception of illustrations. It will be in the hands of publishers by spring, Dr. Kane said.

SEEK TO SPEED POOR AUDIT

An effort to speed up an accounting from the present Allegheny County Board of Poor Directors is to be made tomorrow by Walter H. Riehl, taxpayer, in whose name a bill was recently filed against the Directors in Common Pleas Court.

Recently the poor directors, J. Clyde Miller, Dr. W. L. Henderson and H. H. Dixon petitioned to have Riehl's bill set aside on the ground that they had complied with the law and turned over to the County Controller an audited account.

A court ruling on the directors petition would not ordinarily be made before February 15, but Riehl in his petition will ask that the arguments be heard some time next week. The original taxpayer's bill asked for an accounting for $750,000 spent in the administration of the poor district.

unless delinquent taxes are paid up meanwhile.

Garland, in advocating a reduction, pointed out that Cleveland had reduced its budget, particularly in its supplies department. He said:

"Property values are so low here that it is not only difficult to place new mortgages but on those already placed reductions are being insisted upon."

MUST CUT BUDGET

After the meeting, J. R. Brady, secretary of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, and J. W. Bamford, of the Building Owners and Managers' Association, said they were satisfied with the levy.

The task of slashing another $1,000,000 from the budget now confronts Council. To date the estimates have been reduced by only $750,000, equal to about 1 mill.

As soon as Council had agreed on the tax rate, Controller J. P. Kerr set the machinery in motion for sending out tax statements January 1.

NYE ASKS CURB ON VOTE FUNDS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Aroused by revelations that candidates for the Senate in 1930 spent 15 times as much as the combined salaries for the six-year terms, the Nye Campaign Fund Committee today asked Congress to enact a new and drastic federal corrupt practices act with enough "teeth" to eliminate slush funds and "bought" elections.

The proposed law would place a limit of $5,000,000 on expenditures in behalf of a presidential candidate, a $250,000 limit on candidates for vice presidential nomination, a $50,000 limit in senatorial elections and a $10,000 limit on candidates for the House. Violations of these limitations would keep the guilty candidate's name off the ballot or make him ineligible to hold the office. Prison terms would await other violators of the law.

The committee proposed these drastic regulations to prevent election corruption and maintain American democracy.

2 Guilty in Killing Detroit Policemen

DETROIT, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Bick Dellabonte and Frank Sallmone were convicted of the slaying of two patrolmen of suburban Grosse Pointe Park by a Circuit Court jury today.

Dellabonte and Salimone were accused of slaying Patrolman Ernardt Meyer and Claude Lanstra, June 1, 1930.

Missionary Tells Of Escape in China

HANKOW, China, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Father Patrick Turk, who came back here on Thursday, gaunt and broken in health after 10 weeks in the hands of Chinese Communists, described his gruelling experience today as "humdrum."

He spoke briefly and casually of having escaped by running the lines in a hail of bullets, but he declined to elaborate the story of his experiences.

New Chinese Envoy Assumes U. S. Duties

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Dr. W. W. Yen, new Chinese minister to the United States, assumed his duties today, relieving C. C. Wu. Dr. Yen served as secretary of the legation here in 1910, and was prime minister in 1925-26.

DANCER TO TALK IN DIAMOND KILLING

'Kiki' Roberts Agrees to Return to Albany; Old Pals Shun 'Legs' Bier

International News Service.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 21.—Marion (Kiki) Roberts, sweetheart of the slain Jack (Legs) Diamond, New York gangster, notified District Attorney John J. Delaney she would voluntarily come today from Boston to clear herself of intimations she had helped put the racketeer "on the spot."

With expectation the former showgirl beauty will reveal important information and with two men detained on new clues and another hunted, police hoped Diamond's slayers would soon be under arrest.

DRIVER HELD

John H. Storer, who drove "Legs" on his last automobile ride from the Roberts' girl room to the cheap boarding house where he was killed, was held by authorities after giving information which police said he withheld hitherto.

He revealed Sylvester Hess, Watervliet, N. Y., leader in the "Polka Dot" mob, was in the automobile when he took Diamond from the girl's home to the rooming house.

Hess, he said, left the car before Diamond's lodging place was reached. He had waited in it while "Legs" visited the girl.

An alarm was broadcast for the apprehension of Hess.

Fred Young, owner of the speakeasy which Diamond visited shortly before he was killed, also was detained by police.

PALS SHUN BIER

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Blue shutters tightly closed kept the sunlight out of the room today where the body of Jack (Legs) Diamond lay in an $800 mahogany casket.

The small room in the house of relatives at Maspeth, Queens, held only a few persons at a time, but there was no need to keep any one out. Only members of the family came to see the bullet-riddled corpse, clad in a tuxedo.

The widow, Mrs. Alice Diamond, in deep mourning, sat near the casket, which may not be the one in which the murdered racketeer will be buried at Calvary Cemetery, which is consecrated ground, tomorrow.

WIDOW 'BROKE'

For Mrs. Diamond said she was "broke," and unless friends or relatives defrayed the funeral expenses of the gangster, the expensive coffin would have to be exchanged for a plain pine box.

Diamond's former associates had sent no elaborate floral tributes. The five in the room were sent by relatives.

There was a pillow, three feet wide, made of tea roses and lilies-of-the-valley, bearing the legend: "May you rest in peace."

Mrs. Diamond herself had ordered a floral chair inscribed:

"To my own, after all. Your loving wife."

WALSH URGES SLUMP PROBE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—A joint congressional investigation into the causes of the economic depression, particularly the "collapse of prices of securities on the New York Stock Exchange," was demanded in the Senate this afternoon by Senator Walsh (Dem.), of Montana.

Walsh sponsored a concurrent resolution, which erquires adoption by the House, setting for economic conditions during the depression. He said the country was "suffering from the most profound industrial depression in its history, entailing enormous losses and widespread unemployment." He said this condition was "intensified by the debacle on the New York Stock Exchange in the month of October, 1929."

He set forth in the resolution that "measures to avert the recurrence of similar catastrophes and to alleviate the disastrous results of the existing crisis can be predicated only upon an accurate knowledge and appreciation of the causes giving rise to the same."

Dr. Ewers, Spared Watch, Car, 'Forgives' Bandits

Police today are not searching for the three armed bandits who held up, kidnaped and robbed the Rev. Dr. John Ray Ewers late Saturday night in front of his church, the East End Christian Church, Highland avenue and Alder street, because the police don't know anything about it—officially.

So fortunate did the clergyman account himself that he was able to talk them out of the theft of his automobile and watch, he didn't report the affair.

The three, with menacing guns described by the victim as "clean-cut young men," helped Dr. Ewers into his own automobile, parked in front of his church, shortly before midnight Saturday. What happens when a clergyman is taken for a ride is, according to Dr. Ewers:

"They forced me to get into my car, and we drove around for nearly a half-hour. Yes, they knew I was a minister.

"I attempted after a moment to tell them it was the wrong way to live. They replied that they knew it was wrong. They said they needed the cash.

"They talked of making a getaway in my car. I told them I didn't want to lose the automobile; so they drove to Morewood and Fifth avenues and got out, after they had taken the contents of my purse. They returned the purse."

Father of Bandits Offers To Replace Holdup Loot

Swissvale police today have an offer by the father of two bandits who held up the American Oil Company station, Florence street and Monongahela avenue, Swissvale, to make restitution of the money stolen.

Swissvalle police admitted knowing the identity of the robbers and, although admitting they were searching for them, refused to divulge their names. The holdup, which occurred Saturday, was the fifth in the last six months. The loot was $26.

Nathaniel Pincher, manager of the station, told police he was alone in the place when two young men threatened him with a revolver and fled after taking the contents of the cash register. Several months ago bandits escaped with several thousand dollars after holding up a collector of the company when he arrived at the station.

Police refused to comment on the father's offer and said the two brothers will be arrested.

SIX FOLLOW BOY ON CHRISTMAS SLED TO DEATH UNDER ICE

PARENTS, FOUR YOUTHS DROWN AS RESCUERS

2-Inch Covering on Lake Gives Way, Plunging All Into Icy Michigan Water

MUSKEGON, Mich., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Orville Oman, 7, rode gaily to his death on a Christmas sled in the icy waters of a small lake near his home yesterday, and six other persons drowned in attempted rescues.

The multiple tragedy, which cost the lives of Orville's parents and four boys, occurred near Dalton, in Northern Muskegon County.

The victims, besides Orville, were: Mr. and Mrs. Albert Oman, each 33; Oliver Oman, 12, another son; Harry Ergang, an uncle of the boys, and Frederick and Theodore Morgan, 17 and 14, respectively also nephews of Ergang.

Orville could not wait until Christmas, and his parents gave him his sled yesterday. He set out at once for nearby Ergang Lake. The two-inch crust of ice broke beneath him and he disappeared.

Mr. and Mrs. Oman saw him sink, ran to the shore and pushed a small boat across the ice toward him. Oliver was with them. They, too, broke through the ice.

Ergang and the Morgan boys ventured onto the ice, but it would not hold them and they went down also.

Two Brothers Drown In Christmas Tragedy

While their father, Arthur Roswell, was hunting Christmas trees in a woods, the boys, George, 14, and Virgil, 11, went to the lake and began sliding on the ice. One broke through and the other went to his rescue. Both youths sank before Roswell could reach them.

GIRL, BOY SAVE 2 IN WATER

TOWANDA, Pa., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Beatrice Foster, 12, waded into the cold water of a creek near her home here yesterday to rescue a small neighbor, Everett Knight, 5, who plunged into the water when thin ice cracked. Beatrice was quite a distance away when the accident occured, but at Everett's shout she ran to the creek.

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Henry Wirth, Jr., 5, fell into Lake Lotawanna yesterday and was rescued by his brother, Robert, 7.

Robert, seeing his brother fall from the edge of a boathouse platform, ran to the spot, waited, clutched a foot as it appeared and pulled the sputtering Henry from the water.

CURB VENDORS PUT UNDER BAN

All street vendors—salesmen selling novelties from downtown sidewalks "pitches" were ordered from the streets today by Inspector Albert Beebe.

Beebe's action followed recalling of licenses issued the vendors after merchants had protested to Mayor Charles H. Kline. Director of Public Safety James M. Clark, and Superintendent of Police Peter P. Walsh.

The merchants told city officials that it is unfair to permit transient vendors to peddle their wares on the street in view of the depression and the city tax on stores.

Apple sellers were the sole exception to Beebe's cleanup order.

Eloping Girl Held In Hit-Run Crash

TIJUANA, Lower California, Dec. 21. — (AP.)—An elopement and a traffic accident figured in the records of police who held an American girl today as passenger in a motor car which ran down and seriously injured Robert Talinco, 19.

Officers said Mary Jean Clark, 19, who identified herself as the daughter of a former state senator of Illinois, related that she had come to Mexico to be married to Allan Whitmer, 21, driver of the car, who fled following the accident last night.

FORMER BARON JOINS BRIDGE CONTEST

Culbertson Gets New Aide In 'Battle of Century,' Lightner Back Tomorrow

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Ely Culbertson will have a new partner tonight in his contract bridge "battle of the century" against Sidney Lenz and Oswald Jacoby.

Waldemar von Zedtwitz, who had the title of baron until a year ago, when he became a naturalized American citizen, will sit in for one night; then sail on a long tropical tour. Theodore A. Lightner, who has succeeded Mrs. Culbertson as partner of the "approach-forcing" system's champion, will return to the table tomorrow.

Tonight's session will be the last at the Culbertsons,' the match then moving to Lenz' apartment at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Culbertson is leading by nearly 8,000 points with 63 of the scheduled 150 rubbers played.

Woman Who Escaped Maniacal Butler Tells How Host Was Slain

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Still hysterical from her experience in being forced to witness the torture and assassination of J. W. Schatz, wealthy manufacturer, Mrs. Florence Quick Carozza today told the story of her ordeal. Schatz was killed by his Japanese butler, who then stabbed Mrs. Carozza 14 times.

Her life, endangered by her wounds, was saved when, after a battle that raged through the Schatz home from the third story to the basement furnace room, police, called by a telephone operator, rescued her.

Gentro Akiyama, 36, the butler, and his sister-in-law, Sadoka Otsuka, 26, were held today on first degree murder charges.

The butler, police said, confessed he became enraged when Schatz dismissed him because he had failed to prepare a midnight luncheon for Schatz and Mrs. Carozza.

Akiyama, who earned $200 a month and had charge of the housekeeping money, told police:

"I did not see where I could get any position that good.

"That's why I did it. I intended to kill Mrs. Carozza, too, because I blamed her for having me discharged."

The butler was found hiding under a roll of paper in a coal bin of the cellar, 25 feet from the body of Schatz, who had been slashed to death with a knife after he had been hacked with a hatchet and beaten with a hammer.

DEATH STRUGGLE

During the terrific death struggle, in which the Japanese woman took part, according to the butler's confession, a telephone was knocked over. An operator, hearing sounds of a battle, notified police. Mrs. Carozza said:

"I awakened suddenly to see Yama, the butler, in pajama and dressing gown and an expression of devilish hatred twisting his features, entering the bedroom through a window he had opened from the porch roof.

"I screamed. He bounded across the room, leaped on me and started choking me. Mr. Schatz awakened and started to rise.

"As he did so, Yama seized a bottle of mineral water and struck him across the face with it."

'RAVING MANIAC'

"Regaining consciousness, Mr. Schatz, gashed and bleeding, crawled to the front door and into the street.

"Sadoka ran after him and dragged him back into the house. Then Yama hauled him down a flight of stairs into the cellar.

"A few minutes later he returned to where I was lying on the floor. With a demoniacal grin he asked:

"'Do you want to see him now?'"

WATCHES TORTURE

She was dragged into the furnace room and forced into a chair facing the spot where Schatz was gasping his last. Mrs. Carozza said:

"Then, while I watched, almost hypnotized by horror, Yama plunged a bread knife into Mr. Schatz's face, laughing at me while he did so.

"Suddenly he started for me. I remember feeling several sharp pains as the knife descended followed by several blows from a hammer.

"Then everything went black. . . ."

Mrs. Carozza, separated from her husband, a former state police trooper, is 26 years old. She and Schatz became friendly, she said, when she worked as cashier in a restaurant.

WIDOW IN MOURNING

TUCSON, Ariz., Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Although she had been divorced several years from J. William Schatz, millionaire, who was killed in Poughkeepsie, his former wife, Mrs. J. William Schatz, wore mourning clothes when she left Tucson with her daughter Mrs. William Henderson Kelly and the latter's husband.

Mrs. Schatz and her daughter obtained divorces the same day in Reno, Nev., a few years ago. Mrs. Schatz had been residing in Hollywood, but was in Tucson for the Christmas holidays when she learned of her former husband's death.

Yule Liquor Seized, Alleged Runner Held

A portion of Pittsburgh's Yuletide liquor fell afoul of the law in Butler yesterday. State police seized four cases of Canadian whisky and 60 gallons of alcohol. William Springer, 29, of 3900 Evergreen road, Pittsburgh, who told state police he was bound from Buffalo to Pittsburgh, was charged with transporting liquor.

BELLE SLATED TO TESTIFY AT ANDRE TRIAL

Night Club Queen Called When Fired Employe Tells of Drunkenness by Women

By MILLER HOLLAND
International News Service.

RENO, Nev., Dec. 21.—Belle Livingstone, night club queen, was expected today to take the stand as a state's witness in the trial of Dr. Carl Pierre Andre, young West Virginia dentist, charged with the murder of his discarded sweetheart, Mrs. Martha Hutchinson, 22-year-old widow.

By Christmas Eve Dr. Andre will know whether he is to go free or be executed as a murderer in Nevada's lethal gas chamber.

The week was also fraught with significance for four unnamed young women, one of them a university of Nevada co-ed.

ANDRE MAY TESTIFY

Although Dr. Andre was expected to take the stand today in a desperate effort to save his life, it was not this alone that attracted more than the usual crowd of thrill seekers.

There was something more. It was the prospect that George Griffing, defense witness, might be forced by the prosecution to reveal the names of "four ladies, intoxicated beyond the point of self locomotion," whom he claims he helped carry out of Belle Livingstone's "Cowshed" resort the night of Friday, September 11.

That was the same night, according to Griffing's testimony, that he saw Martha Hutchinson at the "Cowshed" in such a drunken condition she fell on the dance floor five times in 20 minutes and I also helped carry her out."

Griffing, erstwhile doorman at the "Cowshed" and now engaged as a "ladies' near silk hosiery salesman," squirmed and twisted in the witness chair when asked to name the women.

ATTORNEYS CLASH

When the judge said he had to answer, he whispered that one was a University of Nevada co-ed, but begged to be spared the ordeal of revealing her name.

Harlan Heward, of counsel for the defense, leaped to his feet and shouted that "It was a disgrace to let this witness answer those questions."

Assistant District Attorney A. P. Johnson shouted right back that Heward "didn't seem to be much concerned when this man slandered the memory of the dead Martha Hutchinson."

Griffing was put on the stand by the defense in an attempt to show that Mrs. Hutchinson was addicted to liquor and could "well have been so under the influence of liquor when she went riding with Dr. Andre that she fell out of his automobile accidentally."

Miss Livingstone charged that Griffing was trying to "get even" with her because she fired him for "bouncing a sandwich out of the hand of the Governor."

She said she referred to Gov. Fred Balzar, of Nevada.

SENATORS URGE FALL PAROLE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—A parole for Albert B. Fall, former secretary of interior, now in a New Mexico prison, was sought of President Hoover today by Senators Cutting (Rep.), of New Mexico, and Lewis (Dem.), of Illinois.

It was understood on Capitol Hill that the two senators had suggested early action looking toward the release of Fall, who is now eligible for parole.

The President was said to have taken the position that such matters are in the hands of the Federal Parole Board, which acts as an independent body, and is capable of granting a parole on its merits without action by the chief executive.

There have been numerous pleas for the release of Fall, serving a year for accepting a bribe from Edward L. Doheny, oil man.

The Parole Board is understood authoritatively to have considered Fall's case, but no action has been announced.

SLEUTH KILLED FOILING HOLDUP

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Police Detective James J. Caplis was wounded fatally early today when he played the hero in routing four bandits who attempted to hold up a fashionable cafe.

Caplis and two girls were shot when the robbers invaded the cafe where 100 couples were dancing and ordered the guests to put up their hands. Caplis was dining with a friend and instead of lining up with the others, he ran out onto the dance floor and opened fire.

The robbers returned the fire with shotguns, two slugs striking Caplis and two others hitting Peggy Griggs, 20. Another girl, police said, was taken home before her identity was learned.

Weather Conditions.

Low pressure is the dominating influence over the weather over much the greater portion of the country, with centers over Eastern Kansas and Western Missouri, north of Lake Superior and over British Columbia. There is a large high pressure area centered over the North and Middle Atlantic Coast, and relatively high pressure overlies Manitoba and Texas. As a result of this pressure distribution there is much cloudiness over the country and rain is falling at many places. There was a drop in temperature over the eastern states and the southern states, while over the West and Middlewest the change since yesterday was towards warmer. There is no extremely cold weather reported this morning except in Northern Alberta and Saskatchewan.

River Conditions.

The rivers are falling. Stage at Franklin is 3.1 feet. Lock No. 2, 12.2; Pittsburgh, 12.6; Dam No. 7, 7.3; Dam No. 8, 8.9; Dam No. 10, 10.8; Dam No. 12, 12.0. All dams except No. 12 will be raised today.

Oldest Indian Woman Dies in West at 106

TUCSON, Ariz, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—The oldest Indian woman in North America died here today. She was Carnacian Mamake, 106, who saw her people, the Sobai-Puiri Indians, dwindle from a ruling race of 6,000 tribesmen. She was the last member of her race. All others had perished after the Apaches had run them into the desert.

FILM STAR LOST 4 YEARS FOUND

Miss Grant, the Miss Los Angeles of 1922, today was located as a patient in the State Hospital at Patton, victim of a nervous and physical breakdown.

Her disappearance when she was 22 years old and at the zenith of her fame in motion pictures created a sensation. Friends knew that she had been injured in an automobile accident, but did not realize the seriousness of her injuries, and she was taken from Hollywood by her mother, Mrs. Anita Kerr.

DUCE'S BROTHER FALLS DEAD

MILAN, Italy, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Arnaldo Mussolini, younger brother of the Premier, died today of a heart attack while in his automobile with his wife and daughter.

Death was unexpected, for he appeared to have been in the best of health. When he collapsed in the car the chauffeur raced to the nearest hospital, but he was dead when an interne lifted him from the automobile.

Mussolini and his wife had just put Signora Mussolini's sister on the train for Bologna and had started home for luncheon.

Four in Frail Lifeboat Dare Lashing Gale as Ship Burns

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Through heavy seas, lashing winds and driving rain, four men made their way to Rockaway Beach in a frail lifeboat last night after the fishing trawler Abraham Lincoln, of which they were captain and crew, caught fire about seven miles off-shore.

Placing their injured captain, Frank Sanfilippo, of San Diego, Cal., in the vessel's only lifeboat, the crew members rowed frantically away from the Lincoln as the fire, caused by an explosion of the galley stove, crept toward the fuel tanks.

A shower of burning timber rained on them when they were about 100 yards from the vessel.

Joe Carral, uncle of Sanfilippo and a member of the crew, was also injured. The other two, Filomene Pelal and Cominic Piero, escaped unhurt. Two men on shore heard their cries and directed them by flashlight to a sandy stretch of beach.

The Abraham Lincoln, owned by San Diego men, was engaged in fishing for sardines. It was 50 feet long and valued at about $20,000.

Hoovers Arranging Gay Christmas Celebration

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Elaborate preparations for Christmas are afoot at the White House.

As usual, most of the holiday gaiety will revolve around Peggy Anne and Herbert III—better known as Pete—the 6 and 5-year-old grandchildren of President and Mrs. Hoover.

The historic parlors of the executive mansion will ring with the shouts of youngsters at a unique Yuletide party the afternoon of December 23, and as a result of a weighty conference between Mrs. Hoover and Lawrence Richey, the President's stocky secretary, it was certainty Santa Claus was going to pay a personal visit via the fire dining room fireplace, on Christmas morning.

Junior members of society are looking forward with high anticipation to a select dance Mrs. Hoover is giving in honor of her young son, Allan, and speculation is keen as to whom the handsome "American prince" will escort.

Despite all arrangements, Mrs. Hoover is not forgetting that the holiday season this year finds millions in want. All members of the family and intimate friends have been pledged to confine their Christmas presents to purchases of insignificant value, donating the money they would have spent in this fashion to brightening up the day for the needy.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Jr., and Peggy Anne and Peter are expected to arrive from California about Tuesday. Allan Hoover will reach here about the same time.

JOHNSON RAPS HOOVER FOR DEBT 'LASH'

President Trying to Rush Moratorium Through by Night Sessions, He Says

object to being kept here all night by someone outside the chamber. I want to be heard, though, on this issue of transcendent importance.

'ABLE TO PAY'

"I want to present to men in the Middle West who are losing their homes to men who are walking the streets in wasted conditions hunting food that the tax-ridden and tax-burdened citizens of America are going to be burdened with $250,000,000 owed to us and which the debtor nations are admittedly able to pay us."

The debate began prematurely when Senator Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, moved to reduce the length of the Christmas recess from two weeks to six days. Senator Watson, of Indiana, Republican floor leader, said it would be impossible to hold the House in session during the holidays. He added that the recess would not endanger business or the financial structure of the nation.

Senator Harrison (Dem.), of Mississippi, insisted that there were measures before the Senate "far more important than the moratorium because we all recognize the fact that the moratorium has gone into effect." He urged consideration of unemployment relief measures.

Borah said he favored the moratorium, but saw "no reason to shove it through here under a lash and the nadgium for two weeks leaving matters enacted upon that are more important than the moratorium." He said there was no justification for night session prior to a long recess.

STARTS ATTACK

Then Johnson started his attack on the on the administration. He said he was "unavoidably detained from a White House breakfast held this morning causing laughter on the floor and in the galleries. He charged members of the Senate had little conception of what is going on in this land today and little idea of what is permeating the great body of the American people if they thought ratification of the moratorium would prove popular. He said:

"All other the land people are crying for aid and we, forsooth, will sit here all night long for the purpose of putting on their backs the $256,000,000 owed us by foreign nations."

Watson defended the long recess and consideration of the moratorium. He said his purpose was to find out if the moratorium could be ratified.

BORAH PROTESTS

Borah protested against holding the Senate in session at night "because the House would not do its constitutional duty" by remaining in session. Watson told Borah:

"You know how it is when the time comes and you want to go home to your wife and baby."

Borah retorted:

"We've been home for nine months and the wife and baby are tired of us."

Then Senator Dill (Dem.) of Washington asked Watson why President Hoover had not called Congress into special session "if the moratorium is so important a matter." Dill queried:

"Why get excited now and keep us up all night?"

Watson replied:

"Oh, you don't need to be excited to sit up all night."

In his testimony before the Senate Committee Mr. Kahn, dapper patron of the arts, revealed that the banking firm he heads, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., had participated in the issuance of $1,000,136,000 in foreign securities since the war.

Efforts of Senator Smoot (Rep.), of Utah, chairman of the committee, to hasten the interrogation were challenged by Senator Johnson, initiator of the investigation. Johnson insisted the committee have full opportunity to examine Kahn and his list of bond issues. Smoot reluctantly permitted the questioning to proceed.

Johnson demanded:

"Would you say that private debts should take precedence over government obligations?"

Kahn objected:

"You are putting it in a very harsh way."

Johnson retorted:

"I am putting it in a plain way."

Kahn declared that he was not advocating cancellation of the war debts. He said that the United States in plain justice had nothing to apologize for in asking for its money. He added:

"But under the present circumstances it is not a case of justice, but the most expedient thing to do."

He continued:

"We must decide what's the best thing for America to do. What is the best for the United States will be the best for the world."

Senator Couzens (Rep.), of Michigan, asked:

"Why do you call these war debts?"

"We have already canceled the war debts. These obligations still owing us are post-war debts."

Kahn declared the United State has been "generous beyond precedence almost" in giving Europe accommodations from the debts owing the United State.

"You don't subscribe to the European formula of saving the situation at the expense of America?"

Kahn replied:

"I do not, though they try to do it with great calmness and with as little worry as possible to consider what is the best thing to be done. That is not a problem for the banker, but for statesmanship."

BONDS HELD BY PUBLIC

Foreign bonds are not held by American banks, Kahn declared, except short term credits. The securities, he said, "are widely distributed among hundreds of thousands of American citizens."

He further justified foreign loans particularly to the Germans, with the statement that "if the war had continued one month longer we would have spent as much and probably more than all the credits and loans we have made to Germany."

Kahn estimated German short-term credits held by United States banks were in "excess of $600,000,000." This sum, he asserted, is not exorbitant when we consider that it is loaned to an intelligent, hard-working, honest people such as the Germans."

He cited the instances of England and Holland lending "proportionately even larger" credits to the Germans. Such loans, he declared involved only "ordinary risks of business."

CONFIDENCE IN GERMANY

He expressed full confidence that Germany, "in the long run" would pay her debts. Asked if his firm would make a loan to Germany at present he said it would not, "in justice to our clients."

President Hoover's moratorium, Kahn declared, did a great deal of good. More would have resulted from it "if it could have been accepted with the acclaim with which it was first received," Kahn declared.

He emphatically denied that he or any member of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. had anything to do with the moratorium.

He said he wished to call the committee's attention to the fact that Paul Warburg, another member of his firm, was a prominent Democrat and had supported former Gov. Smith in the 1928 presidential election.

Senator Reed (Rep.) of Pennsylvania, interposed:

"It was said on the floor of the House last week that you and your firm had helped elect President Hoover."

Senator Barkley (Dem.) of Kentucky interposed:

"I don't think a man ought to be asked to incriminate himself."

BONDS DEFAULTED

The majority of American bond issues are in default, Kahn declared. An estimate by Senator LaFollette (Rep.), of Wisconsin, that more than two billion dollars of foreign securities were in default was declared by Kahn to be an "under statement."

A large amount of foreign securities which were floated in the United States in recent years are held by small country banks, Kahn said. These bonds, now greatly depreciated in value, he declared, were bought as "secondary reserves."

The committee engaged in a discussion of when the investigation should be resumed and finally voted to recess until January 4, and Chairman Smoot asked Kahn to return at that time.

M'FADDEN SET TO JUSTIFY ATTACK

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Faced with an investigation into his private life by indignant friends of President Hoover, Representative McFadden (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, prepared today to justify his charges that the Hoover moratorium was engineered by international bankers.

Referring to charges made on the floor of the House by Representative Free (Rep.), of California, friend of the President, that McFadden was "guilty of bribery," the latter said:

"This scurrilous matter was raised against me in my campaign four years ago and I was re-elected by the biggest majority I ever had."

CHARGES IN RECORD

The Free charge referred to a law suit in New York between two oil companies. McFadden was a member of a committee which was to put through a sale of one to the other. Free charged that the New York court had declared McFadden guilty of bribery in accepting a fee of several thousand dollars in connection with the sale.

McFadden said the man who brought the suit in connection with the case was confined in Leavenworth Prison at the time.

The Free charges withdrawn at the suggestion of Representative Crisp (Dem.), of Georgia, appeared in Saturday's Congressional Record and caused a flare in the House when discovered. Representatives Rankin (Dem.), of Mississippi, and Blanton (Dem.), of Texas, both declared the Record should be changed, but deferred making a direct demand until Free was present.

MAY ANSWER ATTACKS

McFadden may seek to obtain recognition in the House to answer some of the attacks made on him since his scathing denunciation of Mr. Hoover and the international bankers. He was expected to refer to published reports that the secret service men had been assigned to investigate his past. He said:

"I have evidence that inquiries concerning my past life and activities already have been made among my friends, and also that I am being 'trailed' by secret service operatives."

Although Senator Reed (Rep.) of Pennsylvania, was prepared to take away McFadden's federal patronage, there were indications that attempts to make him pay political penalty would be fought by Pennsylvania House members.

Mrs. Pinchot May Oppose McFadden in Primary

HARRISBURG, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Pennsylvania Governor, may be a candidate for Congress against Representative Louis T. McFadden, who last week charged President Hoover with selling out to Germany in proposing the debt moratorium.

The Governor's wife, who gave McFadden a hard run for the Republican nomination for Congress in 1928, has been asked by some citizens in the Fifteenth District to again become a candidate. So far she has refused to indicate what she will do.

According to reports from Washington, McFadden will have the opposition of the Republican state organization if he is again a candidate in the spring primary next year. Last reports from Washington were to the effect that McFadden would stand for re-election.

Klein Denounced As 'Munchausen'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Dr. Julius Klein, assistant Secretary of Commerce, was labelled "the Baron Munchausen" of the administration by Representative LaGuardia (Rep.) of New York, in a speech in the House today. He likened Klein's prosperity talks over the radio to the imaginations of the German character.

HUGE 'GET RICH' LAND SCHEME REVEALED

Hoover, Ford Deny Promotion Claims While Investors Still Hope for Millions

By A. M. ROCHLEN
United News Staff

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 21.—Millions or bubbles—?

An amazing story of international intrigue, high finance and hopes is now under inquiry by the District Attorney's office in search for an answer to this question for scores of financiers, civic leaders and educators in Los Angeles and in the Northwest.

After weeks of investigation in co-operation with county, state and federal officials and with the better business bureaus here and in Detroit, the Los Angeles Examiner and United News service have learned some astounding details of a project through which many individuals and institutions expect soon to reap millions of dollars or find disillusionment after years of patient waiting and investing.

HOOVER, FORD NAMED

Names of President Hoover, Henry Ford, the du Ponts and the Guggenheims, South American revolutions and bomb plots and battles of industrial giants have been mixed in this strange story with Death Valley dust and mineral deposits—to the tune of $350,000,000 which the hopeful investors may or may not get.

Mayor John C. Porter, Dr. Rufus B. von Kleinsmid, president of University of Southern California, Dr. Edward H. Todd, president of the College of Puget Sound, in Tacoma, M. H. Mosier, millionaire oil man of Fremont Place; the Rev. Dr. Elmer E. Helms, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Los Angeles and scores of wealthy professional men and members of Dr. Helms' church are among those who are waiting, hoping and wondering about the project.

PROMINENT INVESTORS

Some of the prominent Los Angeles and Northwestern residents whose names had been used in the project, and subsequent investigation, made investments while the others admitted to the Examiner and Universal Service that they had been asked to become interested or that their names had been used in alleged filings on the lands in question.

If the millions come, they will materialize from a gigantic land deal now being engineered by Edson J. Young, formerly banker at Hermosa Beach, and the Rev. Isaac F. Hodge, retired Kansas minister and gospel revivalist.

This deal, the promoters have told their investors, is the final move of Henry Ford to control the world supply of nitrates by purchasing from Young, Hodge and their associates certain land deposits in Inyo County for a sum variously reported to range from $12,500,000 to $350,000,000.

HUGE PROFIT PROMISED

The large sum was named to a woman investor who later got her money back. It was from these Ford millions that some investors have been promised returns of 20 to 1 and as high as 30 to 1, mostly on conditions that the profits be turned over to churches, charities and educational institutions.

The fact that Ford, through his responsible representatives, flatly denies that he is interested in Southern California desert lands or has authorized anyone to negotiate any such deal as that described by Hodge and Young, has not discouraged the promoters or the most hopeful of the investors.

President Hoover's name was used in conversations with some of the investors, who were told that Ford had taken up with the President the matter of closing to public entry the lands on which the rich potash and nitrate were said to have been found.

PRESIDENT'S DENIAL

Informed of this alleged claim, the White House issued the following statement:

"The President stated that he never knew there were nitrates in Southern California and, of course, had not discussed any such proposition with the Fords or with anyone else."

On the Ford phase of the case, numerous telegrams have been exchanged with Detroit, and Chief Deputy District Attorney Robert P. Stewart exchanged letters with Ford's representatives before ordering a formal investigation.

Hodge and Young, as well as their attorney, Troy Pace, have been told of these developments, and all have reiterated their faith in the project in spite of the positive statements of the Ford officials and government men that they knew nothing of the huge nitrate program.

EAGLE STEWARD HELD FOR BREW

Charles Davis, 56, steward of the Greensburg Eagles Club, was held for court by a United States Commissioner today under $1,000 bond, charged with selling home brew in the clubrooms.

Two prohibition agents testified they had gone to Greensburg and asked the location of the club from an elderly man they met on the street. They took him, they said, in their car when he told them he was on his way there.

Just before they reached the club, the agents said, their passenger excused himself, saying he would meet them in the club.

Going to the barred door, they presented Eagles' membership cards, but were refused admission, the raiders testified, but when they described the man who was to join them they were allowed to enter.

The agents said they bought four bottles of brew at 10 cents a bottle and then arrested Davis, seizing 32 cases of the beer.

State Trooper Urged For Phila. Cabinet

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.—(AP)—The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin today says that Capt. William A. Clark, of the Pennsylvania State Police, has been strongly recommended to Mayor-elect J. BUILDING WAGE CUT WILL BE FOUGHT

Labor Leaders Predict Resistance to 25 Per Cent Reduction Posted for Jan. 1

Strong resistance to the proposed 25 per cent wage reduction in the building trades of Pittsburgh, proposed for January 1, is predicted by labor leaders here. A meeting of officers of all unions affected has been called for Saturday night at 1901 Fifth avenue.

J. H. Duty, president of the Building Trades Council, denied that union men have been working for contractors at less than the present union scale. He said:

"In these kinds of times, there are always men outside the union who will work for less money, and if the contractors think they can save a few dollars they will hire such men."

No formal statement was made by Duty. He pointed out that some of the unions have agreements with contractors which run until 1933. He estimated 30,000 men would be affected by a general wage reduction.

The reduction has been asked by the Building Trades Employers Association as a voluntary action from the trades. Contractors declare that work is being held up at the present time due to high wage scales and that it will be to the profit of the members of the union to accept lower wages. Contractors also assert there are numerous instances where work has been done at below the union scale.

PARDON DENIED BOY SLAYER

OLYMPIA, Wash., Dec. 21.—(AP)—A parole for Herbert Franklin Nicholls, Jr., 12-year-old slayer of Sheriff John L. Wormell, of Asotin County, was denied and efforts of Father E. J. Flanagan, head of an Omaha, Neb., boys' home, to obtain custody of the boy with the object of reforming him, were deplored today by Gov. Roland H. Hartley.

Gov. Hartley said Herbert, who is serving a life sentence in the state penitentiary for killing the Sheriff in a store robbery, is unsafe to be at large. The decision was based on the testimony of "well-corroborated experts", and the boy's past record, the executive said.

A letter to Father Flanagan assured him the state of Washington could guarantee Herbert "the fullest opportunities in life."

Constable's Slayer Shot Dead in Cafe

BOONEVILLE, Ark., Dec. 21.—(AP)—A stranger in this community, who was identified as the slayer of Constable Montrose Creekmore at Paris, Ark., last Tuesday, was shot to death by two deputized citizens in a cafe here early today.

Seeing the man eating breakfast, Robert Daugherty and Gus Taylor invaded the restaurant and ordered him under arrest. They said he resisted and they shot him several times. Two pistols and ammunition were found in his pockets.

Noted Educator Dies Following Operation

BALTIMORE, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Virgil Mores Hillyer, an educator of international reputation, died yesterday at Union Memorial Hospital where he underwent an operation for appendicitis.

Mr. Hillyer, born at Weymouth, Mass., 56 years ago, was a leading authority on child instruction and the author of a number of textbooks. His "Child's History of the World" was banned from the schools of Perth Amboy, N. J., last February on the ground that it taught evolution.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Complete unofficial returns from Friday's special initiative election in Oklahoma, as tabulated by the Associated Press today, showed Gov. W. H. Murray's income tax proposal, which received the heaviest vote, was defeated by 27,907 votes.

Tries to Shoot Thieves, Kills Self

MARTINS FERRY, O., Dec. 21.—Reaching for his revolver when he heard thieves robbing his chicken coop, Henry Kennedy, 29, a painter, of Deandale, fatally shot himself this morning.

Bavarian Baroness Marries Miami Soda Clerk

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 21.—(INS)—One day, a baroness; the next, the wife of a soda fountain clerk.

But the difference meant American citizenship to Mrs. Joe Jones, who until her marriage Saturday, was the Baroness Alma Gene Stach von Goltsheim, of Bavaria.

4 Youths Confess Barbecue Holdups

Four young men today pleaded guilty in Criminal Court to 14 drug store and barbecue holdups in the county during the past three months. Judge Harry Rowand set January 4 for their sentencing.

They are John King, 21, of East Main street, Carnegie, and Steve Longstreth, 23; Frank Barnhart, 23, and John Hart, 22, all of Oakdale.

Machine Gun Band Loots Chicago Bank

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—(INS)—Bandits, two of them armed with machine guns, today raided the Papanek-Kovac State Bank here and escaped with $10,000 cash.

Poor Woman Holds Old Deed Sought By New Yorkers

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Dec. 21.—(AP)—A deed issued in the seventeenth century but believed worthless for nearly 50 years, may prove a godsend to Mrs. Lillian Walker, of New Castle.

The deed was issued to Reserved Waldron, a Hollander. It was traced to Mrs. Walker by attorneys seeking a clear title to land in the Harlem district of Manhattan Island, New York. The property is wanted for an airport.

Mrs. Walker is 70 and destitute.

Ontario Jailbreak Foiled by Warning

WELLAND, Ont., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Plans for a jailbreak were foiled early today when, acting on information received from an anonymous source, Police Chief George T. Crowe threw a cordon around Welland jail.

The police tip told of plans of Pasquale Ferrati, Louis Gatto and Vito Delveccio to escape. It was believed the plans included the liberation of Nick Kozub, sentenced to hang December 30.

Woman Burned in Oil Stove Blast

SHARON, Pa., Dec. 21.—Mrs. James Jones, 36, of Brookfield, O., was burned probably fatally when an oil stove exploded this morning.

Santa Claus Ship Reaches Porto Rico

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Dec. 21.—(AP)—A Christmas ship carrying food and gifts for the children of Porto Rico from every state in the union arrived this morning.

Jose Padin, commissioner of education, was aboard as unofficial Santa Claus. He said he had brought a check for $15,000 for the establishment of lunch rooms and milk stations for school children, gathered by the Porto Rico Feeding Committee in New York.

Italy Feels Second Quake Within Week

FLORENCE, Italy, Dec. 21.—(AP)—The second series of slight earthquake shocks within a week frightened a number of families along the Mugello Valley north of here into abandoning their homes Saturday, it was reported here today. The families have slept the last two nights in the open fields, the reports said, in spite of freezing weather.

JINGLE SHOWS YULE SPIRIT

It was Claudia Lewis, Glenshaw, Pa., who found the real Yuletide spirit in the Sun-Telegraph Christmas Jingle No. 33 and the judges awarded her the Sun-Telegraph check for $5. Many other lines submitted had the holiday ring, but the judges thought hers the best. Here is the jingle as she completed it:

A restaurant owner named Burns
Took only small profit returns
And he gave much away
To the poor folks each day
"Peace on earth, good will" were his terms.

The five $1 prize winners were Marjorie Kapner, 7913 Inglenook place; C. V. Loos, 6529 Brighton road; Ben Avon; R. Benton Gray, 1007 Irwin street, Aliquippa; Marie G. Kinyan, 343 S. Millvale avenue; Martha M. Titzell, 1400 Soles street, McKeesport.

Winners for Jingle No. 34 will be announced tomorrow.

Auto Crash Peril Seen in Crowding

Curious motorists who linger at the scene of an automobile accident provide a menance which may result in another crash, Paul C. Wolff, secretary of the Automobile Club of Pittsbugh, declared last night. The considerate motorist, Wolff said, is the one who continues his trip if he can be of no assistance. Curiosity seekers, he declared, cause traffic jams which invite other mishaps.

Three Munhall Girls Found in Phila.

Three Munhall girls who had been missing since Wednesday were found in Philadelphia and will be returned to their homes, according to word received last night by the girls' families. They are Rose Desbov, Erna Bodnar and Betty Reposky, all of Whitaker way, Munhall.

'Legs' Diamond's Crime Career

Universal Service herewith presents the first of two chapters sketching the life story of Jack "Legs" Diamond, whose turbulent gangland career was finally snapped by a crackle of gun-fire that pursued him, unrelenting, for more than seven years.

By SEYMOUR BERKSON

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—The rise and fall of Jack "Legs" Diamond amid a bloody reign of gangland guns is one of the underworld's most spectacular dramas.

No longer will Diamond sneer with equal disdain at bullets—and the law.

No longer will his slim figure grace the bright spots of Broadway to the tune of tinkling glasses and the rhythm of dancing girls.

And never again will his trigger finger strike terror in the hearts of the quiet townsfolk of the leisurely Catskill Mountain community where he sought to model a little Cicero after the pattern of Al Capone.

But the bullet-riddled career of Jack "Legs" Diamond will nevertheless be long remembered as a symbol of a tempestuous era—

The era of gangland terrorism, nurtured by a fierce rivalry to quench the prohibited thirst of the American people.

LISTED ON CHURCH BOOK

Diamond was born in Philadelphia 36 years ago. And on the parish register of a little church in the City of Brotherly Love, a fading scrawl of ink still spells his name.

"John T. Diamond."

And there also is inscribed the name of Edward Diamond, Jack's brother, who shared his gangland exploits until tuberculosis snuffed out his life two years ago.

Their mother died while they were children and their father, a minor Democratic politician, never seemed quite able to keep his two boys out of trouble.

In their old haunts along the Port Richmond section of Philadelphia there are still some who recall their reckless expeditions of petty thievery and vandalism as members of a schoolboy mob which dubbed itself the "boiler gang," because its headquarters were in a set of abandoned marine boilers on a vacant lot.

After their father had despaired of keeping them in school and tried to get them jobs, Jack and his brother migrated to New York, and began an apprenticeship in organized crime—at the bottom of the ladder.

SALVATORE SPITALE

Jack climbed much faster than his brother, but always found a place for the kid in his mob.

It was as a package thief and a dance hall sheik that Jack earned the nickname "Legs." He was as nimble on his feet in running away from a wagon with a stolen bundle as he was in swaying a little flapper on the polished floor.

But Jack didn't stay with the wagon "bouncing" gang long.

He graduated to burglary. And it was on one of his initial jobs that he was caught and sent to the New York Reformatory for a year when he was 19.

VALUABLE LESSON

That taught Jack a lesson, however, for—with the lone exception of a term for desertion after the war—he survived each of 25 succeeding attempts of the law to remove him from society until gangland vengeance scored a victory where the law had failed.

After his release from the reformatory, Legs resumed his burglary exploits but with more caution.

Then came the World War. . . .

Diamond joined the Army. But he wasn't cut out for military discipline. So he disappeared from his camp. So did some Army supplies. And when Uncle Sam finally caught up with him in New York City in 1919, he was sentenced to Leavenworth for five years.

But Diamond only served a year. He was pardoned by President Harding in what ironically happened to be the President's first act of clemency.

ENTERS GANG WARFARE

Free again, he enlisted in another army, an unofficial one known as New York's East Side gang.

And there it was that Legs got his first baptism of gangland fire, in the fall of 1924.

He was riding down Fifth avenue when a car drew alongside. A shotgun muzzle poked through its side curtains and spat a volley of lead. Except for a grazing wound on the forehead the only bullet that pierced him struck him in the heel.

The gangland Achilles limped into a hospital, received treatment under an assumed name.

Jack began to be recognized in the East Side gang as such a capable and merciless gunman that Little Augie Orgen, the gang's chieftain, picked him as his bodyguard.

Everywhere that Little Augie went, Legs was sure to follow—Until one October night in 1927.

LEGS JOINS ROTHSTEIN

Little Augie was making a "professional call." And Legs was with him. As they drew up to the curb and stepped out of their car, there was a rattle and roar of gunfire.

Little Augie dropped to the ground dead. Legs dropped alongside of him—two bullets in his chest.

But Legs and his trigger finger had already carved a little niche for themselves in gangland and when he got out of the hospital no less a kingpin than Arnold Rothstein, czar of New York's underworld, made him his bodyguard with a weekly salary of $1,000.

It was under the influence of Rothstein and his gangland grandeur that the ambitions of Legs Diamond soared to the dizzy heights from which they fell—punctured by the bullets of the gangsters whose rackets he thought he could confiscate.

Faith Reaffirmed By Christian Scientists

Aaron E. Brandt, of the Christian Science Committee on Publication for Pennsylvania, today issued the following statement:

In the Sun-Telegraph of December 5, Arthur Brisbane opines that because the government has decided to interest itself in disease research, "this will not please those who believe that disease is unreal," and he adds:

"But when cancer develops, their belief, unfortunately, changes."

Permit me to say that Mr. Brisbane's remark as to change of belief does not apply to those who know that disease is unreal. Hundreds of cases of cancer, diagnosed as such by reputable physicians, have been healed by such knowledge.

The difference between belief and understanding is apt to be as great as the distance between the poles. Christ Jesus said:

"Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

Mrs. Eddy, the discoverer and founder of Christian Science wrote in Science and Health (page 346):

"The nothingness of nothing is plain; but we need to understand that error is nothing, and that its nothingness . . . must be demonstrated in order to prove the somethingness—yea, the allness—of Truth."

And in Unity of Good (pages 9-0) she said:

"By knowing the unreality of disease, sin and death, you demonstrate the allness of God."

In due time Mrs. Eddy will be generally acknowledge to be the most scientific woman that ever trod the globe. Her conclusions regarding matter, reached over 50 years ago, are now being confirmed by some of the greatest natural scientists of the world.

The fact that many physicians now recognize both functional and organic diseases as mental in orgin, is another big step in such recognition.

An electric refrigerator is a modern convenience to which every progressive American home properly aspires. We have boldly cut the red tape which has so long kept this product in the luxury class, and offer a standard electric refrigerator, which we can fully guarantee, at revolutionary low prices, through short cut—factory to consumer—distribution methods. The refrigerator is here to speak for itself. Compare it point for point—size, construction, material, finish, insulation, refrigeration unit, motor, quick freezing, and guarantee—with any electric refrigerator on the market, selling at $50 to $60 higher, and make your own decision as to the best refrigerator value on the market today.

Convenient Payments

May Be Readily Arranged With Our Credit Department

Our price is a cash price, with a plan of monthly payments provided, if desired. Contrast Horne prices with those of comparable standard makes, employing expensive selling features and long-time payments.

The Dayton Electric Refrigerator was first choice of seventeen large stores from among many makes studied and scientifically tested over a long period of investigation. Their combined buying power was exerted to effect the lowest possible price.

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS

Frocks made half light and half dark, frocks made of two fabrics or two colors, or both, are extremely smart and promise to remain fashion highlights throughout the spring season. This model, attractively seamed, formed its bodice yoke and sleeve top of the new light green; the darker fabric was brown. Both were canton crepe. You'll find a delightful choice of new shades just ideal for this frock.

Pattern 2219 is obtainable only in size 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44. Size 16 requires 3 yards dark and 1¼ yards light fabric, 39 inches in width. Yardage for every size, and simple, exact instructions are given. No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern.

Send 15 CENTS in coins or stamps (stamps preferred), for each pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE WANTED.

GLYCERINE

never evaporates

Why run the risk of having your anti-freeze evaporate (without any notice whatever!)? Why take a chance with freeze-ups? G. P. A. Radiator Glycerine does not evaporate. One filling lasts all winter—giving 100%, worry-proof protection.

And because one filling lasts all winter, G. P. A. is more economical than the cheaper "fade-away" anti-freezes that desert you when you need them most. No unpleasant or dangerous fumes either!

Tested and approved by Contest Board, American Automobile Association. Produced only by members of Glycerine Producers' Association.

W. VA. COAL MEN TO TALK SALES

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The regional sales agency plan for stabilizing the bituminous coal industry will be discussed at a meeting of coal operators of Northern West Virginia here January 6.

Letters have been mailed to 150 operators announcing the meeting will be held at the Fairmont Hotel. They were signed by C. H. Jenkins, vice president of the Hutchinson Coal Company; R. C. Hill, chairman of the board of directors of the Consolidated Coal Company; H. L. Findlay, president of the Simpson Creek Coal Company; John M. Jamison, president of the Jamison Coal and Coke Company; Edward Page, president of the New England Fuel and Transportation Company, and E. H. Reppert, president of the Reppert Coal Company.

Operators active in advancing the plan said informal meetings have been held in the region and lively and friendly interest in the proposal was shown among the operators.

2 GUNMEN ROB STORE OF $500

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Two robbers who worked coolly and systematically robbed the Joseph W. Johnson men's clothing store of about $500 today.

Two clerks and another man were in the store as the two men, both young, entered. They scooped the money from the cash register and ordered the three into an office and told the clerks to open the safe.

At this juncture the proprietor and another clerk entered and they were taken into the office and forced to open the safe. A customer came in and he, too, was sent to the office.

With the money in their pockets, the robbers covered the sixth with guns, forced them to lie on the floor and warned them to remain there for 10 minutes on threat of death.

FLOODS SPREAD IN MISSISSIPPI

CHARLESTON, Miss., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The east delta counties of North Mississippi bore the brunt of flood waters today as highlands gave aid to refugees, forced to desert inundated homes and farmlands in the lowlands.

Weary flood fighters of Panola County, having strengthened the levees of Tallahatchie River, considered their battle won, but held fear that Tallahatchie and other counties farther south would face in the next 36 hours the most serious floods in years.

Highways in the northern half of Tallahatchie County were submerged, and a rise of a few feet more in the Yacona River threatened to force Crowder's 400 inhabitants to flee. Webb and other small communities by tonight may face similar flood danger.

Santiago Woman Finds Mate Suicide

James Brandoline, 65, shot and killed himself with a revolver as he lay in bed at his home, House 293, Santiago, yesterday, according to a report to the Coroner's office. He was found by his wife upon her return from a visit to her daughter in Midway, Pa. Mrs. Brandoline told deputy coroners her husband attempted to shoot himself several weeks ago, but that members of the family disarmed him. He had been ill and worried over money lost in the closing of a Pittsburgh bank, Mrs. Brandoline said.

Youngstown Man Killed in Crash

KITTANNING, Pa., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Steve Starr, 39, of Youngstown, O., was killed in an automobile accident near here early today when the car in which he rode crashed into a wall. Police said Josephine Coffman, 23, of New Castle, was driving and that she had no operator's license.

HILL TAX CUT DRIVE OPENS

A petition for reassessments of Hill District property to be presented to City Council was approved by property owners of the Third and Fifth wards at a meeting in the Theresa L. Kaufmann auditorium yesterday afternoon.

The move, according to officials, is the result of depreciation of values and continued high assessments of property in the Hill. Speakers pointed out that unless a reassessment based on present values is made, many property owners are in danger of losing their homes and investments.

Speakers included Morris M. Berger, Frank S. Delp, Sidney A. Teller, director of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement; H. Z. Davidson, Israel Parker, Frank Weinstein and B. Hirsch. William Lando presided.

GRASSHOPPER POISONERS ILL

DENVER, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The State Industrial Commission has reported that 13 cases of severe illness has resulted among Northeastern Colorado men who five months ago aided in the wholesale manufacture of poison bran and alfalfa used to curb the ravages of hordes of grasshoppers.

Medical authorities who have treated the cases differ as to probable outcome of the illness, characterized by open sores, weakness, inability to control their lower limbs and liver disorders.

At Crook, Col., the Logan County physician, said the illness undoubtedly resulted from lack of ventilation in a barn there when seven carloads of poison was mixed with bran and alfalfa.

Halts Runaway Team In Oakland Chase

Commandeering a nearby automobile, Patrolman Charles A. Hays, reporting at Oakland Police Station, raced a runaway team of horses several blocks down Fifth avenue yesterday and brought them to a halt before any damage was done.

The team, attached to a milk wagon, broke loose on Robinson street, dashed on to Fifth avenue and raced several blocks before it was brought under control by the patrolman.

HIGH SPEED GIRL — By May Christie

CHAPTER XXVII.

A few days after the dramatic episode of the necklace, Laurel was called up by Imogen.

"I'm going out on the hat tonight with Sammy Schumph and—say—we've got a man for you—a swell fellow—"

"Is that so? I know the type! Well, count me out," drawled Laurel.

"Why the ritzy airs? And who's your other date?"

"I'm going out in the country to the opening of a home for crippled children."

"Tell that to my Aunt Maria!"

"No. It's true. I'm not kidding."

"Say did that doctor fellow ring you in on this?"

"Bruce Harvey did. This home's his doing."

"Well, I'M not ready for it yet, and it's news to me that you've gone in for holy works," jibed Imogen.

Laurel flung back: "I think it's about time that you and I did amount to something . . ."

Imogen ignored this thrust. She began to tell Laurel about a wonderful ring with a tiny watch set in it that Sammy had given her.

"An engagement ring?" asked Laurel absently.

"What? With a healthy wife in the lunatic asylum?"

"Oh, I forgot that. I was mixing him up with Timmy Tewson."

"Oh, I don't see Timmy any more," volunteered Imogen. "He got jealous and domineering, and he said the worst things about Sammy. So we kind of quarreled."

CHANGE OF HEART

"Maybe he's right? Timmy knows his way about this town and it seems to me you don't."

"Well, I'm trying to amend my ignorance as fast as possible! Say, won't you come out with us this evening after your slumming's over?"

"I can't," said Laurel tersely. "Because you won't break away from your darling doctor?"

"Maybe you're right. That's my affair anyway. Goodbye, Imogen."

This change of heart had been gradually working in Laurel for some time. And yesterday—when Bruce Harvey had called on the Oakes family and found only Laurel in—this feeling of wanting to amount to something in the world had found expression.

She had promised to go out today to Long Island, to the opening of his home for crippled children.

She had promised more than that. She had promised to take an active interest in the little patients.

She would visit at the home regularly. Bring cheer and toys and books. Play games with them.

And, as opportunity afforded, she would take some of the stronger children out riding in her car. And there was a musical little boy there whom she might give lessons on the violin.

Was this really reformation? Or (Laurel flushed at the alternative) . . . was it because she was so strongly attacted to the young doctor?

PARENTS DRAWN CLOSER

She had a magic tide back with him that night. It seemed as though a current of electricity trembled between them.

When they reached her home on Park avenue, she said: —"You'll come in?"

"I'll be glad to."

Mother and father were both out, but TOGETHER! She got this information from the butler.

Well, strange to relate, that had happened several times recently.

Since the incident of the necklace (which Connie wore now all the time) and the unexplained bill from the uptown florist's, Connie and Michael had drawn closer to each other.

"They understood that you were dining in the country, Miss Laurel—"

"That's all right, Bates. Lay covers for two. Dr. Harvey and I will dine here."

"Won't you come out? We'll go to Sherry's or the grill floor of the Ambassador?" suggested Bruce.

"No, I think it would be nicer to dine quietly at home," said Laurel.

It was a charming meal. Over the lighted candles and the roses, the young man thought that Laurel never looked lovelier.

Her face sparkled with vivacity. Her mouth was like a bright red flower. Her eyes were dark and beautiful.

They softened wonderfully when he talked about the home. Could this be the same girl who had once told him impatiently that children bored her to the limit?

But that had been merely idle froth. Now he was seeing the REAL woman that was Laurel . .

"I'll do everything I can to brighten up those kiddies' lives—"

A DISTURBING CALL

They talked and talked and talked.

"Coffee in the living room, please, Bates," said Laurel to the butler.

It was cosier in there. The lights were not turned on. But a log fire crackled on an open hearth, and the air was sweet with the perfume of lilac.

"You sit there," Laurel indicated a deep armchair while she herself curled up nearby on a bearskin rug in front of the fire.

He did so. A soft pink glow mingled with the firelight. He set the tiny coffee-table at the doctor's elbow.

Bruce looked at the young girl. He meant to say: "Will you have one lump of sugar or two?" but instead he said, with a little catch in his voice: "Laurel—you're beautiful—"

Then he appeared on the threshold of the living room. "Miss Laurel, you're wanted."

"Who is it, Bates?"

"St. Mark's Hospital."

A HOSPITAL calling her up? Good heavens! Had some accident befallen dad—or Connie?

"The call must be for me," said Dr. Harvey, quickly. "I was an interne at St. Mark's, and they've called up my home and been put through here—"

"No, sir, it isn't for you they asked. It was for Miss Laurel—" corrected the butler.

She went out to the hall. Her face went ghastly white as she listened over the telephone.

"What's that? What's that you say? GOOD GOD!"

IMOGEN SHOT

The receiver had fallen from her fingers. Her lips shook as she cried:

"Oh, Bruce—it's Imogen—she's been SHOT!"

Imogen SHOT?

Bruce Harvey grabbed the telephone receiver and put a few quick questions.

Then he hung up. He took the scared Laurel by the arm and led her back to the living room.

"She's still alive—I'll go at once—"

"Oh God!—Bruce—how did it happen?"

"They don't seem to know much at the hospital, except that she was dining in a speakeasy with two men."

"Yes—yes! She wanted ME to join them. She called me this morning about it"—and Laurel shivered.

"The men brought her in a taxicab to the Out-Patient department. They dumped her on the interne, told him she'd been shot in a holdup, and then beat it."

"She's alive, you say, Bruce?"

"Yes—but unconscious."

"Oh, Imogen—poor Im—" tears raced down Laurel's cheeks. "you think—I mean do the people at the hospital think—she won't live?"

"I don't know. It doesn't sound so good. She's been shot through the chest."

"No. She's unconscious."

"Then how?"

"They found a note from you—or some sort of message with this telephone number on it in her pocket."

"Then why—"

"They called up here in order to find out about her. You might be a relative—they wanted to get in touch with her friends, naturally."

PRAYS FOR FRIEND

He was out in the hall, buttoning his overcoat.

"Let me go too. Maybe I can be of some use."

"No. No. That wouldn't do. You couldn't help your friend at all. They wouldn't let you see her."

"Then I'll go along with you and wait—"

"No. I'll be right back."

Now it held tears—tragedy—memories of someone MURDERED!

No! Im surely wouldn't die? God wouldn't be so cruel . . . ? Sowing the wind, and reaping the whirlwind . . . that was poor Imogen!

Hurled from the Gay Life! WHERE . . . ?

Into Eternity!

Laurel bent her head in the firelit room, and, for the first time in a long while, prayed . . .

Prayed that poor Im might live! Would God listen?

Prayed for herself, too. All her own folly of the past two years . . . would it be forgotten?

Blot the slate clean! Set a second chance!

Would it be given to her—with Bruce Harvey?

She wasn't worthy of a man like that. But Oh! She'd try so hard to be, if—if he wanted her!

Bruce returned in about an hour.

"She came to, all right. She even spoke to me a little. We gave her an opiate. She's sleeping."

"She'll live?" Laurel grabbed him by the lapel of his coat.

"I think she will. The bullet passed right through the upper part of the right lung—but it's a good, clean wound. And she has a lot of vitality."

HARVEY PROPOSES

"Bruce—" she drew him into the living room—"did you find out—exactly how it happened?"

"When she came round, she told me that three men entered the speakeasy . . . somewhere over by the West River in the thirties . . . for the man called Sammy Schumph. It seems he knew that he had enemies. These masked men came in and ordered everybody's hands up, while one of them covered Schumph. This girl—Imogen—who was sitting next to Schumph, jumped up, screaming. The man fired. I think the shot was probably meant for HIM . . ."

"Timmy Tewson said he was a bad man," Laurel volunteered. "He said this Schumph was in the narcotic game."

Imogen Fairly did not die, although for a time she hovered between life and death.

Then the tide turned. The long, weary convalescence came. But Imogen lived.

Laurel often went to see her in the hospital. Imogen's illness was marked by the entire absence of Samuel Schumph . . .

"Yellow right through!"

And she lost Timmy Tewson, too. She would have been a lonely girl, had it not been for the kindliness Laurel . . .

"Come in the matron's room for tea. You've done enough good work for the day, and now I want your smiles to be shed on ME!"

"Vain man!" She came, none the less. And immediately after tea, the matron—a windly soul—left them alone . . . this pretty girl, and the handsome young man.

"Laurel!" There was a fire in the room, and some jars of daffodils and the heartening yellowness of the spring sunshine.

"Yes, what is it, Big Doctor?"

"Laurel—" he took her hands in his—"Laurel—I love you—"

Music of the spheres! The Pipes of Pan! Spring magic!

"Say it again—again—"

"Laurel, I love you! Will you marry me?" She drew back a little. Try to camouflage. Say something gay! Hide her emotions!

She couldn't, with those eyes of gray looking so deep in hers. She couldn't hide her soul from him . . .

"I love you, too," said Laurel, very gently. And she put her arms about him.

THE END.

CITY DISTRICT RELIEF BODIES IN MERGER

Ward Organizations Join In Central Group Seeking New Efficiency, Economy

Plans for the organization of all ward relief organizations into one body were formulated yesterday at a meeting of leaders of the organizations in the City-County Building.

Attorney Harry I. Miller, chairman of the Surplus for the Needy Committee, was named chairman of the new organization, and Leo G. Altmayer purchasing agent. The association has no connection with the Welfare Fund.

It is planned, leaders said, to do the same work as the ward relief organizations have been doing, but, by buying in larger bulk, and with greater supervision, to eliminate much expense.

A storehouse will be occupied in the downtown section in the near future, officials said, from which distribution will be made. All church relief organizations and other kindred bodies have been invited to join the organization.

It is planned as a means of speeding the work of relief and of eliminating duplications. Other officers elected yesterday were James F. Quick, secretary, and Harry Hosick, treasurer.

FLAMES SWEEP NEW LINER

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Fire yesterday destroyed the interior of the liner Segolia, leaving the nearly completed United Mail Steamship Company vessel half submerged at her berth.

During the five-hour fire the ship, which was to have been commissioned January 30, listed twice and finally turned over on her side. The fire was of undetermined origin. Three fire tugs played streams of water on the burning vessel while men from six fire companies battled the blaze from the shore.

Her construction for refrigeration purposes made fire fighting unusually difficult, the powdered cork insulation smoldering and creating a baffling smoke.

ASSOCIATED ART JURY NAMED

The Associated Artists of Pittsburgh have elected, by vote of the entire membership, their jury for the forthcoming annual exhibition.

Ernest Lawson, of New York City; Charles Burchfield, of Gardenville, N. Y., and Henry G. Keller, of Cleveland, O., have been elected.

All three are artists of national distinction, well known through their contributions to the annual exhibitions at the Carnegie Institute.

The jury will meet to select the paintings and make the prize awards at Carnegie Institute, January 30.

Uniontown Teachers Face Salary Cut

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Dec. 21.—Uniontown's school teachers must suffer the loss of their positions or accept a cut in salary, it has been announced by members of the School Board.

In order to make ends meet during the remainder of the year the teachers must accept a cut or it will be necessary to close the schools. Members of the board are uncertain whether the body will be able to meet the obligations of another month of the school term.

Legion Chief Near Collapse on Tour

GRIFFIN, Ga., Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Threatened by a physical breakdown, Henry L. Stevens, Jr., national commander of the American Legion, has canceled speaking engagements in Georgia and started for his home in Warsaw, N. C.

Physicians said the strain of covering nine states in three weeks on a speaking tour had placed Stevens on the verge of collapse.

Santas Sought for Children Facing Bleak Holiday

POLICE 'SHAKEDOWN' CHARGES PROBED BY PARK

SANTAS SOUGHT FOR CHILDREN IN NEED

'Secret' List of Youngsters Fearing Toyless Christmas Offered by Sun-Telegraph

An opportunity to make Christmas mean something to those boys and girls whose families are not served by the welfare organizations is offered to Pittsburghers today.

Persons desiring to furnish toys to children of needy and worthy families may get the names and addresses by calling Grant 6500 and asking for the Christmas Editor.

In this way the donors can get in direct touch with the families and personally deliver the toys.

The list of names, compiled by Dr. Ben G. Graham, superintendent of public schools, and his teachers, has been arranged so it will supplement—and not conflict with—those of charitable and welfare organizations.

These youngsters belong to families which, for various reasons, are not on the welfare lists. Many of these families, only temporarily distressed because of general conditions, still maintain their pride. They refuse to ask for anything.

School teachers, however, have been able to observe the condition. Without announcement of any kind in the schoolrooms, they have quietly supplied these names. The identity of the boys and girls will be known only to their benefactors.

Ingram Minister Cuts Own Salary

Stating that he believed that most of the members of s congregation had been seriously affected by the economic crisis, the Rev. Dr. C. C. Cribbs, of the Ingram Presbyterian Church, announced at the morning service in his church yesterday that he had voluntarily cut his own salary.

Beginning the first of the year, he said, he would return to the church treasury part of his monthly salary, an amount equal to loss of income suffered by many members of the congregation.

Zoologist at Pitt To Explore Orinoco

CHARLES AGOSTINI EMMET BLAKE

EXPLORER-TO-BE MEETING A TOUCAN, BIRD OF THE JUNGLES

Expedition to Seek Strange Reptiles, Mammals

Emmett Blake, Pitt instructor of zoology, is on his way to Miami—to get things in readiness for a big adventure on the good ship Buccaneer.

Within 10 days Blake, the scientist, Leon and Fred Mandell, wealthy Chicago merchants, and several others, will embark on the Mandell yrcht for deep sea fishing in the Gulf and a scientific exploration in the jungle about the Orinoco River in Venezuela.

The Buccaneer, 115-foot ship, will carry the adventurers 225 miles up the river, whose shores are as wild as only a jungle growth can be. The adventurers will move over mountains and through the bush for strange reptiles, mammals, birds and whatever scientific material they can find.

The scientific collection which Blake will get will be turned over to the Field Museum in Chicago. The trip is expected to extend six weeks.

Night Club Host Held by Police

Claiming to be an actor and master of ceremonies in night clubs, a man who registered as Joey Mack, 28, of Atlantic City, was found asleep last night in the Civic Club rooms in the William Penn Hotel.

To Magistrate Leo Rothenberg this morning, Mack said he was out of work, had attended a party last night and didn't remember going to the Civic Club. He was held for further investigation.

BOY SHOT, PAIR ACCUSED OF ROBBERIES

Youth Accidentally Wounded By Accomplice, Police Say; Woman Denies Buying Loot

Police today continued to investigate the activities of Thomas Stelmak, 18, of 1303 Fontella street, and Charles Anderson, 2322 Magnolia street. They were arrested yesterday at the Allegheny General Hospital, where Stelmak was taken for treatment for a gunshot wound inflicted accidentally, police said, by Anderson. The police reported they admitted two robberies.

Shortly after the arrest of the youths, police also took into custody Mrs. Lucy Esposito, of 1226 Penn avenue, proprietor of a confectionery, where the pair were said to have sold loot. Released on forfeit, Mrs. Esposito failed to appear at a hearing in Morals Court today and was ordered rearrested by Magistrate T. D. Jones.

After questioning, the prisoners admitted, police said, the holdup of a chain store at St. Ives and Kirkbride street, last December, and the attempted holdup, recently, of the Union Ice Company, Union avenue.

The shooting occurred in a house in Preble avenue. Anderson, cleaning his automatic, accidently discharged the weapon, the bullet entering Stelmak's knee. Anderson took Stelmak to the hospital in a street car.

Such, at least, is the opinion of Mrs. George S. Goodspeed, expressed upon her retirement as director of Ida Noyes Hall for Women at the University of Chicago. After 43 years of service, Mrs. Goodspeed said:

"Every year the girls become more charming, more practical, more effecient and more wonderful.

"People who say there is anything bad about the modern girl are just looking for trouble."

RELIEF APPEALS SPUR DRIVE

Workers in the Welfare Fund and Emergency Association Campaign began work today with renewed vigor, spurred on by reports of increased demands for help upon welfare agencies and the Allegheny County Emergency Association.

During the past week additional subscriptions, represented largely by increased "special" contributions, cut the balance needed for success to $529,418. The total raised to date is $5,451,766, including the $750,000 conditional offer.

Reports to Welfare Fund headquarters by the Family Welfare Association indicate continued increasing appeals for aid. Families under care on December 1 were 13,029, against 10,008 in November. The Emergency Association, with 5,000 wage earners working and 5,000 families receiving weekly benefits, reports 10,000 awaiting jobs.

Chicago Subscribes $10,000,000 in Drive

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Over the top by nearly half a million dollars in its $10,000,000 campaign to aid the needy, the Cook County Joint Emergency Relief Fund called off its workers Saturday with a total of $10,422,937 subscribed and more belated subscriptions expected.

The campaign officially opened October 15. The special gifts division, under the leadership of President Robert M. Hutchins, of the University of Chicago, began its work two weeks earlier.

RELIEF RACKET CASE CLOAKED IN MYSTERY

North Side Officer Held, Identity of Other Men Accused Not Revealed

District Attorney Andrew T. Park today was planning an investigation into alleged police "shakedowns" on the North Side. At the same time Albert J. Eber and Alfred E. Schwenke, of the Twenty-first Ward Relief Fund, issued a denial that Plainclothesman Thomas O'Branovich, of Woods Run Police Station, held in connection with an alleged "shakedown" attempt, was in any way connected with their organization, for which it was alleged he purported to be selling tickets.

O'Branovich, released on bond after detectives said, he was arrested for an alleged "shakedown" of Mrs. Anna Gustius, 50, of 1257 Ridge avenue, denied the charge, and said he was selling tickets for the benefit performance staged by the Twenty-first Ward Relief Fund.

The District Attorney's probe has been placed in charge of First Assisant District Attorney George F. P. Langfitt, who has refused to give names of witnesses who are to be questioned or the identity of those accused of collecting large sums of money.

O'Branovich has been a patrolman for eight years, but for the past six months has been working in plain clothes out of the Woods Run station.

VOTE MACHINE SUIT RESUMED

Hearing of the taxpayer's equity suit to prevent the county from paying $415,000 due the Poole Engineering and Machine Company for Allegheny County's voting machines until certain changes are made in them, was resumed before Judge Frank P. Patterson today.

Gilbert C. Cloonan, head of the county election bureau, Chet Cooke, an employe of the company, and S. Procter Brady, its president, were the first witnesses.

Brady testified the machines had been built to comply exactly with the County Commissioners' specifications.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

DAIREN, Dec. 20.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

They got a new gag in Europe now to help along their argument that America should cancel the debts. They are appealing to our egotism, and they figure we are not short on it. The new gag is "America won the war and she should pay. We admit that it was America coming in when she did that determined the destiny of the World War. Therefore she is responsable for present European conditions, and should put them right." Now ain't that a hot one? No matter what you do you are wrong. If you help 'em lose it you are wrong, if you help 'em win it you are wrong. There just ain't any such animal as international "good will," it just lasts till the loan runs out.

Yours, WILL.

Testing Tournament Bridge Hands in Hospital Rooms

Patients at the Tuberculosis League Hospital, the beneficiary of the present sale of Christmas seals, testing out the hands held by players in Lenz-Culbertson bridge tournament. They haven't decided which of the two disputed bridge systems they prefer.

Christmas Seal Dependents Welcome Bridge Battles

By PENELOPE REDD

The Lenz-Culbertson bridge tournament is a welcome diversion to a group of young women patients at the sanatorium of the Tuberculosis League. Faithfully they attempt to follow the day's play.

Penelope Redd

These prisoners of hope would prefer less leisure. Stoically they accept the enforced idleness which is the basis of their medical treatment. Gradually they learn from fellow patients to meet each day with grace and sportsmanship.

Victims all of the hurried world, because life pressed so hard that tuberculosis had overtaken them before preventive measures could be marshaled for their protection.

These are but four out of thousands gallant, struggling, in the tense serenity of sanatorium isolation, apart from the normal busyness of a useful life.

Every one has a chance to assist in the prevention of tuberculosis. The Christmas Seal has steadily built up the Tuberculosis League, which trains and educates the medical profession and the public to prevent tuberculosis and to avoid the consequent disheartening sickness.

That all pennies may count at full value, a volunteer organization is handling the returns of the Christmas Seal sale. Early returns will greatly reduce the cost of handling the seals.

Woman, Four Men in Jail As Fowl Theft Suspects

Five suspects, one a woman, were in County Jail today, held for court on charges of stealing livestock from residents of Mifflin Township.

According to Police Chief J. J. Crawford, of Homeville, the five are members of a gang believed to number more than 40 men and women.

Friday at 7:30 a. m. Crawford arrested Stojan Radnovich, 37, of Dravosburg, on a complaint of Jacob Storg, of Bull Run. Radnovich, it was said, was taking a sack of 22 chickens to the alleged headquarters of the gang in a cabin on the Buttermilk Hollow road, near Bettis Field, when he was apprehended.

On information received from Radnovich by Crawford, Patrolman A. F. Butko and Constable Frank Snyder, the four other suspects, were arrested at the cabin. According to the police, the feathers of approximately 300 chickens and the hides of two calves were found in the house. They arrested Katie Crnovick, 38; Joseph Derose, 19; Maike Sacco, 48, and Frank Tony, 48, all of Mifflin Township. They were given a hearing Saturday night before Justice John R. Engle.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

THERE'S A CELEBRATED ACTOR on the big street who is famed far and wide for his stinginess. And he really is a corker. This guy wouldn't pay a dime to see Reri dance the rumba with Andy Volstead. Come to think of it, maybe I wouldn't, either.

At any rate, this actor has that "I won't pay for anything" reputation. It's not that he doesn't mingle with the mob. He does. He'll smoke any brand of cigaret that you happen to have with you, and he'll drink your liquor until the last man is out. But when it comes his turn to buy, he suddenly loses his power of speech.

He was over in England last summer, and returned to New York on one of the sportiest of the ocean liners. There were quite a number of theatrical people on this particular trip, and when they learned that this famed actor was to be with them, there was much speculation about the way he would act.

"I tell you," offered one chap, "that F— is the cheapest mug in this whole wide world. I'll bet anybody right now that he won't buy a single drink for anyone on this entire trip. And I'll bet he'll drink with us every night until the bar closes."

One of the other men shook his head.

"I know he's bad," he asserted, "but he can't be as bad as all that. No man could follow a policy like that and maintain his self-respect. After all, he's a very big man in the theater. I think you're wrong."

They talked on and on—with the result that a wager of $100 was made. The first man bet that the actor wouldn't buy a round of drinks during the crossing. The second said he would. It was agreed, however, that the actor was not to be shamed into the purchase by word or action.

Before the journey was three hours old the actor was mingling with the boys in the ship's bar. He mingled with them until the dinner hour and had a grand old time. When he reached his cabin, he was beautifully pickled. And he hadn't bought a single drink.

It was that way each and every day. The actor seemed to have no conscience whatsoever. He would stroll the deck with various women and wait until he noticed some of his companions at the bar. Then he would steer the lady in, draw up some chairs, order the drinks—and let one of the others take care of the check.

On the final day of the voyage, the boat was scheduled to dock around 9 o'clock in the evening. The stewards in the bar notified the customers that the bar would be sealed promptly at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. No drinks would be served to anyone after that hour.

At 2:30, a large party was in progress at the bar. There were the actor, the two men who had made the original bet, and some 15 others. Up to this time, the actor was still the head man. He had yet to buy a drink.

The chap who was about to lose his bet was burning up. Not only had this actor cost him plenty in drinks during the trip but he was going to cost him $100 in cash in the bargain. He broke his agreement and looked pointedly at the actor.

"The bar closes in half an hour," he cried loudly. "Anybody who wants to buy a drink at this table had better order it now."

Promptly at 3 o'clock, the bar was closed. In full view of every one, the losing bettor paid off his debt, muttering at the same time that he didn't see how one man could be so cheap.

The actor glanced at his watch. It was 3:10. He stood up and summoned the waiter.

"Waiter," he declaimed, "is the bar closed?"

"Yes, sir," was the response, "it has already been sealed."

The actor shook his head sadly.

"Tch, Tch," he said moodily, "Isn't that a shame? And I wanted so much to buy just one more round for the entire crowd." . . .

Speaking of actors and boats and such, you may be interested in Morton Downey's tale about Maurice Barrymore, deceased father of Ethel, Jack and Lionel.

When Maurice first reached this country back in the good old days, he had an English accent to which American audiences couldn't quite accustom themselves. As a result, he was around town for several months without a job.

Finally, growing disgusted, he tossed up the sponge and went back to England. After listening to him for some time, the English managers also refused to give him work. But they had a different reason. It was their opinion that too much American had crept into Maurice Barrymore's speech and that English audiences wouldn't quite understand him!

So Barrymore came back to New York and again waited for something to turn up. He was playing pool in an actors' club one afternoon when another member and a guest came through the room.

"And that," he heard the member tell his guest, "is Maurice Barrymore. He's a great actor. Isn't it a shame the way he wastes his time?"

Barrymore stood erect and turned around.

"Wasting my time, nothing," he growled sourly. "Over in England they tell me I'm too American. Over here in America they tell me I'm too English. If things keep up like this, the only way I'll be able to earn a living will be to do a monologue on the boats!" . . .

FUNDS SOUGHT BY CHILDREN'S HOME

Low Finances Hamper Activities of Institution On South Aiken Avenue

An appeal for funds to further the work of caring for homeless children at the Children's Home Society of Pennsylvania, 467 South Aiken avenue, was being made today by officials of the institution.

A plea on behalf of the children, who are accepted at the home for later adoption by responsible persons, was made by the Rev. C. T. Murdoch and the Rev. E. E. Harter, heads of the institution.

More than 30 children are now in the home, being cared for by voluntary contributions. Since the founding of the home, 35 years ago, nearly 5,000 children have been placed in responsible homes, officials said. Within the past two months 30 children were placed.

While the children are available for adoption, the Rev. Mr. Murdoch said, a thorough examination of the prospective foster-parents is made before the child is placed in their care.

As the result of low finance in the institution, there are more than 300 homeless children on the waiting list—homeless because of the inability of the institution to care for them. It is for these children that the appeal has been made.

In most cases, Mr. Murdoch said, both parents of the children have died. In other cases one parent has died and the other is unable to care for the children.

6 FACE HEARING OVER BEATING

Six men were to be arraigned in South Side Police Court today in connection with an alleged attack on Felix Scullion, 28, of 43 South Nineteenth street, who was found injured on the Lake Erie Railroad tracks at the foot of South Twenty-second street, yesterday. He was removed to South Side Hospital where it was reported he was suffering from a fractured skull.

The prisoners said they were William Clark, of 2322 Sarah street; James Hennessy, of 2230 Sarah street; John Riley, of 53 Barry street; George McGonigle, of 624 Excelsior street; George Brown, of 87 South Sixteenth street, and Charles Schuster, of 907 Sarah street.

OBITUARY

Finkelpearl Funeral.

Funeral services for Joseph Finkelpearl, 67, of 1142 Greenfield avenue, retired druggist, who died Saturday, were held yesterday in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Irwin Pochapin, 5714 Beacon street. He was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania 44 years ago and was said to have been the first Jewish druggist in Western Pennsylvania. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Fannie Finkelpearl; two sons, Julius and Maurice Finkelpearl, and two daughters, Mrs. David H. Light and Mrs. Pochapin, all of Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Hyman Silverman.

Mrs. Marian [illegible]n Silverman, 75, wife of Hyman Silverman, died Saturday in her home in the Ambassador Apartments, East End. Mrs. Silverman was a lifelong resident of Pittsburgh. Besides her husband, she leaves four daughters, Mrs. Ella S. Bell, Mrs. G. C. Priest and Mrs. Mildred S. Punco, of Pittsburgh, and Mrs. C. E. Nicklas, Wellsboro; three sons, Harry H., William L. and Alfred M. Silverman, of Pittsburgh, and three sisters and one brother.

Hetzel Funeral.

Funeral services for John C. Hetzel, former city treasurer of Allegheny and until his retirement 10 years ago connected with the City Assessor's office, were held yesterday. Mr. Hetzel died Thursday in his home, 3661 Perrysville avenue.

Thieves Force Safe, Escape With Cash

Scaling a ladder to the second floor of the Loretta Auto Service, 4237 Murray avenue, thieves early today took $119 from the safe after knocking off the combination.

Yuletide Season Activities

Nearly 1,000 Girl Scouts participated in the first Christmas carol service held by the combined troops of Allegheny County at Trinity Cathedral, Sixth avenue, last night. The Very Rev. N. R. High Moor, dean of the cathedral, spoke on "A Bit of a Song." Special music was rendered by the Trinity choir.

The presentation of a four-act Christmas play, "Emmanuel," by Dorothy Lehman Sumerau, was a feature of a special Christmas service at St. John's Lutheran Church, 1945 Forbes street, last night. More than 400 attended the service, followed by a candy treat for children. The Rev. R. E. Dozer, pastor, spoke on "Have You Found Him?" at the morning service. Offerings will go to the Lutheran Orphans Home of Zelienople.

Reckless use of energy is endangering the health of young women throughout the country, according to Mrs. R. W. Johnston, past president of the Congress of Clubs, speaking over radio station WWSW yesterday on behalf of the twenty-fifth annual Christmas seal sale of the Tuberculosis League of Pittsburgh, which closes Christmas eve.

The booth sale of the league closes tomorrow, when final reports will be made by 30 sale chairmen. The funds accrued through the annual sale are used to further the league's educational program and fight against tuberculosis.

A benefit card party will be held at the Hotel Schenley Tuesday by the Fourth Ward Relief Fund for the purpose of providing Christmas baskets for the poor. The committee is composed of Mrs. Howard Neely, Mrs. James J. Coyne, Miss Della Conwell, Mrs. Carrie McCandless, Mrs. Elizabeth Quailey, Mrs. Elizabeth Hailey, Mrs. James Blaine Smith, Mrs. M. Grossman, Mrs. Patrick Cain, Mrs. Thomas F. Coyne, Miss Mary Conwell, Mrs. Philip Coyne, Mrs. I. A. Mamaux, Mrs. Charles Ehersberger, Mrs. Coleman Coyne, Miss Ida Holleran, Miss Jessie J. Turnbull and Mrs. Clara A. Duffy.

Allied Boards Seek State Redistricting

A resolution recommending that all constituent bodies begin agitation at once for the election of a 1933 Legislature that will make an equitable apportionment of the state for Assembly and congressional elections has been adopted by the Allied Boards of Trade.

The resolution was presented by the Ross Township Board of Trade. It also urges that the member bodies "begin now to plan for the kind of support that will counteract any sinister influences that may be brought to bear upon the many excellent men who will no doubt go to Harrisburg in 1933."

NO. 33 TROLLEY ROUTE CUT

Effective tomorrow, cars of the Pittsburgh Railways Company on Route 33—known as the P. & L. E. Transfer—will stop at the point where the route crosses Saw Mill Run boulevard instead of continuing to Mt. Washington by Woodruff avenue.

The change is being made due to construction of the Saw Mill Run boulevard extension by the county.

Passengers to West End points will be taken care of through transfers on Route 40—Mt. Washington cars—and the Castle Shannon incline.

When the county road work is completed, railway officials said, it is planned to use buses to transfer car patrons from the terminal which goes in use tomorrow to Mt. Washington and adjacent points, following practically the same route as the cars now use.

DON BESTOR RADIO INTERVIEW :-: Mary Roberts Rhinehart Signs N. B. C. Contract :-: LOMBARDO'S BAND

We Now Present

By Darrell V. Martin, Radio Editor

Darrell V. Martin

ONE THING RADIO stations have lots of is TIME . . . NBC boasts 97 clocks . . . CBS 71 . . . KDKA 13 . . . WCAE 7 . . . WJAS 5 . . . KQV 4 . . . and WWSW 3 . . . The theme song of every production man is "Time On My Hands" . . . Seconds in a radio station have the same importance as whiskers in Russia or queues in China . . . Clock-watching is a very important part of the day's work . . . It cost NBC $250,000—no more, no less—to put its microphones into the hall of prima donnas for those Metropolitan Opera broadcasts . . . Mary Roberts Rinehart, once of Sewickley, Pa., now of Washington, D. C., has signed a contract to write continuities for NBC . . . Watch for more sketches similar to "Moonshine and Honeysuckle" and "The Goldbergs."

When we corner Don Bestor in WCAE studios tonight at 6:40 we expect him to reveal quite a few facts you've always wanted to know . . . . Each Monday night we shall interview a local or national radio celebrity. . . . We invite suggestions.

Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of NBC, heard so much about Don Bestor when he was in Pittsburgh last, that he decided to investigate . . . result: Don's 12:33 p. m. broadcast on KDKA each day but Sunday may be put on the blue network before January 15 . . . Don's band is practically the same but—oh!—what special arrangements! He's on KDKA at 11:30 tonight.

Question a Day:

I've heard of mariners "boxing" the compass and fighters boxing for money, but what in the world does an announcer mean when he "boxes" artists? Maybe I'm wrong, but I'm pretty sure that's what I heard Bill Sutherland say at WCAE the other day. I decided I would ask you later rather than be embarrassed by asking Mr. Sutherland.—Marcella G., Beverley Hills.

Answer—Don't feel that way. Announcers and artists around Pittsburgh studios are glad always to answer questions. When a small group of artists, like a trio, perform in a large studio, the production men form a small studio within the studio by placing burlap or felt curtains in a "box" around the artists, thus diminishing the sound space and creating a more perfect acoustical condition. These curtains are mounted on wooden racks which reach almost to the ceiling of the studio. They are easily handled and very necessary some times.

"The Shadow"—sinister figure of Detective Stories—wouldn't come to Pittsburgh for that new series sponsored by a McKees Rocks firm so the feature is to originate in New York studios of CBS every Tuesday night at 10 o'clock, starting January 5.

Studio Lights

Old Heidelberg, commemorated in the musical play of that name which became known in America as "The Student Prince," is to be brought to the American armchair direct from the ancient German cathedral by CBS-WJAS at 6 o'clock New Years Eve . . . It is to be exactly midnight in Heidelberg when the broadcast begins . . . Big Ben in London is to be another part of this celebration.

CBS has engaged Ann E. Warwick, a good-looking New York miss, as the "first woman television announcer" . . .

Eddie Cantor's final program has been set for Sunday, January 3, having been changed from January 10 . . . He goes to the coast on January 4 to make another motion picture.

Time of the broadcast from Ellis Island has been set for 2 o'clock Thursday over NBC-KDKA.

Bob Crawford comments that "Uncle Bob and Betty" aggravated the unemployment situation yesterday by throwing a lot of "dads" out of work . . . believe you me, as Ted Husing would say, that comic reading stunt was the prize local broadcast of the year . . .

THE LOUDSPEAKER :-: By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—An announcement three years ago that the Metropolitan Opera House had decided to open its gates to the broadcasting brigade would have sent huzzahs echoing through the parlors of the land.

Today. Well, today is different. Today it is like the news that South Carolina has gone Democratic or that a new low in the stock market has been reached. People utter their "oh, yeah?" and go on with their necktie buying. Most persons expected such an announcement sooner or later. They felt even three years ago that it was only a question of time. Hence, their inability to be disturbed.

Three years ago, you'll remember, the Metropolitan was a high and mighty fortress of musical art. It still is. But the fortress three years ago was impenetrable to that mighty army that mixes art and business and which right now has America in the grip of its huge electrical paw.

The battering rams of the broadcasters had no effect. Neither did the high pressure talk of their diplomats. Radio might hoist its flag over other institutions, but by the gods of Wagner, it would not fly over the imposing gold gray pile at Broadway and Fortieth street.

Yessir, even though Caruso was in his heaven, all was well with the Met.

So the broadcasters withdrew their siege, went on to other conquests. Such conquests! They captured the Chicago Civic Opera, the Philadelphia and Philharmonic, and on rare occasions, the Boston symphonies, to say nothing of a host of lesser symphonic organizations stretching from Gotham to the Golden Gate.

They set up recruiting posts and by an endless show of gold attracted every important opera and concert star, with one or two exceptions, in the land.

Oh, their work was thorough. They scoured every musical meadow, left nothing untouched, in their march to the radio sea. Leading chamber music groups, singing ensembles, every organization with the slightest claim to musical art flocked to their banners. Even the very singers whose voices were not allowed to penetrate the ether from the sacred walls of the Met joined up. The gold of the broadcasters was so glittering, you see. And apparently so inexhaustible.

Is it any wonder, then, that the public, treated to such an array of talent over a span of years, is not excited at the news that the high and mighty opera house is going over at last to radio?

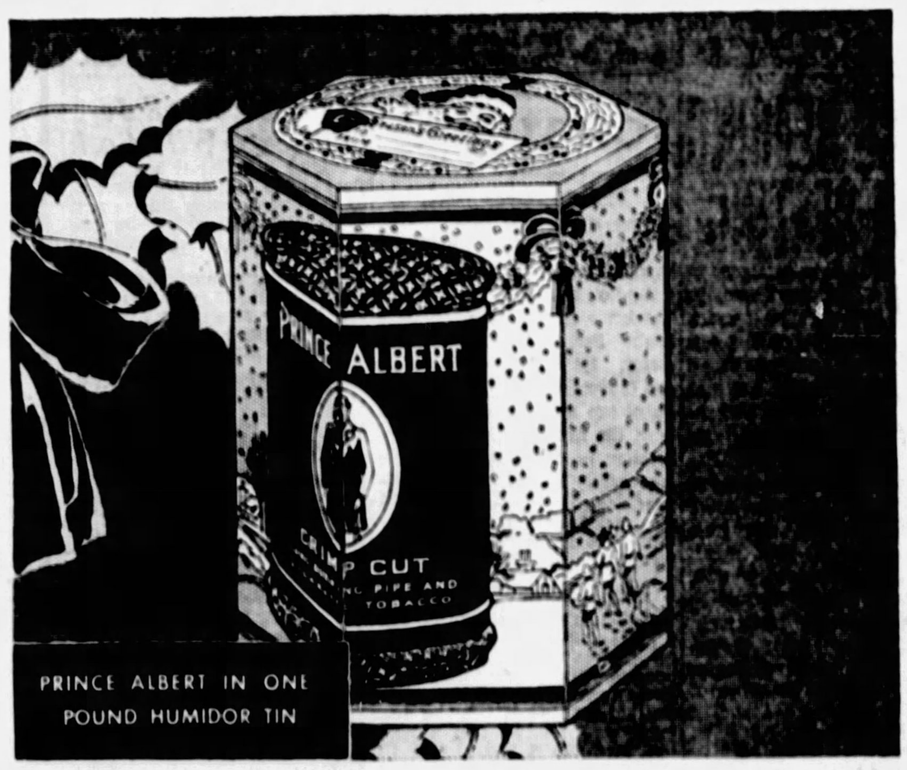
A friendly Christmas suggestion from Winston-Salem

ONE POUND OF PRINCE ALBERT IN CRYSTAL GLASS HUMIDOR



PRINCE ALBERT IN ONE POUND HUMIDOR TIN

CARTON CONTAINING 10 PACKAGES OF 20 CAMELS EACH

CARTON CONTAINING 4 PACKAGES OF 50 CAMELS EACH

IT IS NOT the cost of the gift, but the thought that lies behind the giving that warms the cockles of the heart on Christmas morning.

Then, instead of some short-lived trinket, how much nicer to give something that will bring solace and delight for many days after the Christmas tree is gone; until the New Year is on its way.

For the cigarette smoker, man or woman, of course give Camels. A blend of choice Turkish and mild, sun-ripened Domestic tobaccos, they are kept fresh and prime by the Camel Humidor Pack, with their natural moisture unimpaired by parching or toasting.

In appropriate holiday wrapping, Camels come both in attractive Christmas cartons containing ten packages of twenty and in cartons containing four boxes of fifty each.

For the man who smokes a pipe, we suggest either a pound tin or one of those crystal glass humidors of good old PRINCE ALBERT. Here is a present that goes straight as a Christmas carol to a man's heart; P. A., the best loved pipe tobacco in the world, all dressed for the occasion in bright Christmas costume.

What gift can you think of that will be more welcome or give more genuine pleasure and satisfaction?

Don't you hope someone will think of such a friendly gift for you?

TELL IT TO SALLY -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By SALLY MARTIN

Should Girl Be Forgiven for Mistake of the Past?

Once in a mad moment long ago, she made a mistake.

And now that she and he are engaged she has confessed it to him.

Should he hold her all the closer for the pain she has suffered in the past?

Should he respect her all the more for her honesty and honesty she has shown by telling him of that mistake?

Or should he be outraged and cheated because she doesn't come to him with a spotless record?

That's the question that Disgusted Lover is asking. What's your answer?

Dear Sally:

I wonder if you will help me? I feel so confused and sore-hearted and I don't know what to do.

For some time past I have been going with a girl whom I have learned to love. To me she is perfect in all ways pure and sweet. Recently she told me that she loved me and that I was the only man who ever had kissed her heart that I was. But to marry me I was required when she accepted me.

Plans for our wedding have been made for quite a while and all our friends have been told that we were about to take the nuptial vows. It seems as if we were ideally suited to one another, and I truly believed that she was the girl of my dreams and that we would always share the joys and sorrows side by side.

But all has changed now and I have been thrown into the depths of darkest despair for she has told me that there was only one man whom she thought she loved and to whom she honestly gave her all.

COMPLETELY CONFUSED

Now I don't want to seem to be a prude but her admission has completely changed my conception of her. She completely changed in my mind's eye. I cannot reconcile myself to what she has told me and I am finding it in my heart to forgive her our marriage.

Am I right? Shouldn't I desire the woman I pick for my life partner and the mother of my children to come to me with clean hands or should I assume a broader minded view of this affair and let bygones be bygones. I don't know what to do. I seem to be thrown into complete confusion.

DISGUSTED LOVER

Well before I answer your question let me ask you one, Big Boy.

Have you got absolutely clean hands yourself? Or is there a dark chapter or two in your own life that you wouldn't want to see the light of day into?

SHE WAS HONEST

There are mighty few of us who haven't made mistakes and I'll gamble you've made plenty. Maybe they weren't the same kind of mistakes that this girl made. Maybe they were. But do you feel that they make it impossible for you to be a decent citizen and a loyal husband and father?

Of course you don't! They're past, you say. I've learned and profited by them and outgrown them. I'm trying to do better now. Oh yeah? Then why not give this girl the same chance that you ask for yourself?

You admit that she seemed all that was fine and sweet and decent until she herself confessed that old error to you because she did want to come to you with clean hands and no secrets on her soul?

Are you going to throw her down because she was honest enough to tell you the truth? Is that the way you are going to reward her? Or are you going to be man enough to say "I haven't always been an angel either, honey. Let's join hands and live for a fine upstanding future?"

If you're willing to do that then go ahead and marry her. But if you're not, don't.

A Real Home Is a Marriage Bond Not Lightly Broken, Says Fay King

By FAY KING

The main reason for marriage is to make a home.

If a man doesn't want a home and just wants to be seen about with attractive and entertaining women he does not need to marry.

There are plenty of drink and dine dames in the world who don't want any domestic responsibilities either.

But there even comes a time when the playgirls and playboys feel an urge to settle down and enjoy a home life and become devoted to home and family.

That is why it is sometimes so surprising the marriages that are made. Because with a home in mind a man and a woman are more considerate of qualities beyond mere beauty and gayety.

Madge's Cleverly Arranged Plan Meets Set-Back

"Careful!" I murmured the warning to Noel quickly, emphasized the word by an imperative pressure upon his arm. "You can find out her meaning and Mary's real thoughts later. Just now, listen."

He obeyed me docilely, but I sensed that his nerves were even more tensed than mine as we waited for Mary's answer to Mrs. Arlen's smooth insinuation that her career had made her lay aside "everything else" patently meaning love and marriage.

"Thank you so much, Mrs. Arlen," Mary said sweetly. "It is so dear of you to say all those nice things to me. I am quite overwhelmed. I assure you. And I am afraid I do not deserve them. I am sure I should be very vacillating if left to myself. But perhaps you know that Mr. Veritzen tolerates no looking back when one has put one's hand to the plow. One certainly cannot serve two masters when he is one of them."

I mentally saluted my husband's charming niece. In effect she had said to her opponent—for I knew she instinctively had recognized the older woman as such—

"It may rain tomorrow and then again it may not." Her formula, one as old as time and much in use through the ages, not excepting the present one, by rulers, writers and diplomatists, was a perfect thing in its slipperiness. Mrs. Arlen could read into it whatever answer she wished. For that matter, so could Noel or his father, and taxed later with a question as to her meaning, Mary could say smilingly, "Yes, that is what I meant," or "Oh, how could you think I meant that?" with equal certainty that her questioner could have no possible hook upon which to hang a contradiction.

Mary pointed her little speech with a charming upward glance at Noel's father. He smiled at her with apparent indulgence, but I saw his keen eyes flickering over her face and knew that he recognized every move of the little game she was playing.

But Mrs. Arlen's brain did not move so quickly. I saw a satisfied expression in her still fine eyes, and she smiled at Mary charmingly. I already had judged her to be possessed of good humor and natural kindliness—in any case where her own interests, and especially those of her daughter, were not threatened. Then I was sure that she could be ruthless.

"I fancy you are right, my dear." She sent a provocative side glance at Philip Veritzen. "That's what I've always heard about you, Phil, that you're a terrible taskmaster, perfectly merciless!"

Mr. Veritzen bowed as if he had paid him a tribute, and indeed I think he considered it as such.

"You don't know the half of it, Mrs. Arlen," Lillian struck in. "The lady who created the character of Simon Legree must certainly have been gifted with the power to see into the future and visualize Phil. There never was such a slave driver since the days of the old Romans. Indeed, Phil, I've believed in reincarnation since I knew you. Isn't he the picture of an old Roman emperor?"

"Flee for your life, Veritzen!" Harry Underwood lounged into the room, followed by Dickey, and my heart began the time-honored process known as coming into my throat. How would Dicky greet the man whom I knew he disliked more than any other of our acquaintance? One thing I had for which to be grateful. The encounter held no surprise element for him. The telegram had prepared him for Mr. Veritzen's arrival, and on their return from their stroll he and Harry could not help but have seen Otto and the Veritzen limousine.

"When she gets to comparing you with the old Romans, it's time to hunt a cyclone cave," Lillian's husband went on. "She thinks I'm Nero every now and then."

"Augustus, Augustus, my sugar!" Lillian blew him a kiss, "because you're so good and great."

It was the most banal sort of foolery, but I knew Lillian had started it purposely to keep both Mr. Veritzen and Mrs. Arlen so occupied that they would have no opportunity to interfere with the desired colloquy which she and I were tacitly agreed Noel should have with Mary.

Dicky himself brought my attention back to him when he put out his hand to Mr. Veritzen with a carelessly cordial greeting which would have given any casual observer the impression of gracious host welcoming returning friend. I introduced both men to Mrs. Arlen, and Lillian immediately drew them into the bantering conversation which I knew she could keep up indefinitely, and which gave me the chance to get Mary away from them for which I had waited.

I slipped my hand under her arm when the eyes of both Mrs. Arlen and Mr. Veritzen were elsewhere engaged, and drew her away from the little circle. As I did so Noel stepped impulsively forward and spoke the one word, "Mary!"

And then from across the room came a soprano call with purposed babyish affectation in its coaxing accents:

"No-el! Come talk to Avis.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Schick Test Invaluable in Checking Diphtheria

Diptheria used to be one of the most dreaded of all diseases. It afflicted young and old. Fifty years ago the deaths in this country from diphtheria were about 115 persons out of every 100,000 of the population. Last year there were less than six persons out of every 100,000.

Dr. Copeland

I am happy to say that because of immunization this disease can now be prevented. By means of the "Schick test" we can determine whether a person will contract the disease if exposed to diphtheria.

This is a simple and painless procedure. It can be given by any physician, or by the local health officer. The test consists of injecting into the skin a tiny drop of toxin. This causes a welt, or swelling. If this swelling disappears quickly, the test is regarded as "negative." If the spot turns red and stays red for about a week or longer, the test is called "positive." When the test is positive it means that the individual, unless immunized, can contract the disease.

This knowledge is of tremendous value in saving the lives of children. If all children were tested and immunized against diphtheria the disease would be completely eradicated. This protection can be given at any age, even to a baby when but six months old.

The immunization is produced by the injection of a substance called "toxin-anti-toxin." Three injections are given at weekly intervals. There are no serious after effects from this treatment and often the child is unaware of the injection.

Scientists agree that no child should be denied this protection. It is believed, too, that the injections should be given as early as possible. The reason for this is that diphtheria is most dangerous between the ages of six months and five years. Please remember that few children are naturally immune to diphtheria. If a child is immune to diphtheria that is all the better, of course, but the fact can only be determined by the Schick test.

If your child has received a Schick test and it was found to be positive, do not hesitate or delay the injections. If your child has not been "Schicked," attend to the matter at once.

Bear in mind that diphtheria is definitely preventable. But the means of protection for your child can be applied only by your consent.

Parents who have children under school age should talk with the family doctor or health officer about this important measure. This protection is within the reach of everyone. There is no excuse for not protecting your child from diphtheria.

L. E. P. Q—What will bleach freckles and how should it be used?

Answer—Equal parts of lemon juice and peroxide will bleach freckles, but the preparation may prove drying to the skin. In this case apply a good cold cream after each treatment.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Greeting Card

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Last year I received a Christmas greeting card from a young man at the office. I thanked him for it, but this year I should like to send one to him. He is married and I am not acquainted with his wife. Would it be proper for me to address my card to Mr. and Mrs.? I think that just sending the card to him would not be in good form. Am I right or wrong?

2. Also, what would be the correct way to sign my name? Just my Christian name or my full name, or Miss Morrow? He signed his card to me with his Christian name only. M.

1. Thoroughly right you are, that the card should be addressed to both the young man and his wife. And this is true even if you do not know his wife. Send the card to the home address, addressed to both.

2. If the card is of the informal type that it seems to be from your description, you should sign either your name in full or your first and last name. Don't, under any circumstances, sign only your first name, and don't sign Miss Morrow. Sign either Edith Morrow, or, if you have a middle name and wish to use it, sign Edith Wells Morrow.

Gifts to Teacher

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I should like to send a Christmas and New Year's greeting card to my former dancing teacher at high school, also to her sister who is a dancing teacher and with whom I studied last winter and with whom I shall resume my studies in a month or so. I do not know their home address.

1. Shall I send a card to them separately, one to high school and the other to the studio?

2. How soon before the holidays shall I mail them?

3. Should a return address be written on the upper left corner of the envelope? Should my name be written on the card? If so, on the front, inside, or back of the card?

I read your column every day and always look forward to it. Your information is so helpful and always written so graciously. A. A.

1. If there is a way of finding out the home address it would be better to mail these cards to the home address. But if this is impossible, then mail the cards separately, one to the high school and one to the studio.

2. Mail them so that they will arrive as near Christmas day as you can plan.

3. If you have doubts about the card's arrival, it is quite correct to write your address on the back of the envelope.

Write your name on the card, in the place that is apparently most appropriate for it. It depends on the kind of card. But try not to write it on the back of the card.

A Thoughtful Gesture

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please settle this for us? A says it is the proper thing, when a couple or party leaves an over-night cabin, after spending the night, to drive to the office and say they are leaving, also that they liked the place and would stop there again if they happened to be in that section.

B would like to know if this is proper, or whether they should just drive away without saying anything. READER.

A's judgment about this seems to me the gracious one, and I am sure that the office manager would be very happy to have a guest make this thoughtful and kind gesture. And it would take such a little minute!

Contract Bridge -:-

OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Beware of Business Redoubles

When thinking of redoubling a business double, first consider the advice given to a young couple about to be married who consulted Mr. Punch, the answer returned was "Don't!"

Z bid 1-club. A overcalled with 1-diamond, esteeming his king of clubs as a certain trick. Y went 1-spade. B topped him with 2-hearts. Feeling quite confident of a probable game at his partner's make, Z jumped to 3-spades. Being void of the adverse suit, A bid 4-hearts. Y bid 4-spades which B doubled, excepting his queen of spades to win a trick. Both Z and A passed. Y should have done the same and he would have scored his contract doubled. Instead of passing, Y redoubled, B and Z passed, but A bid 5-hearts, was doubled and A-B went down only a single trick—a far better result than letting Y-Z go game doubled.

Sound rules for redoubling a business double are as follows:

1. A redouble of a business double ordinarily assures the redoubler's partner of fulfilment of the contract, also stating that further adverse bidding can be heavily penalized.

2. When not vulnerable, if at least one opponent is judged to be easily frightened, a redouble may be a psychological attempt to frighten one opponent into a resumption of bidding in order to double and defeat the advanced contract.

On the next hand Y-Z could make just three-odd at hearts, and A-B could do the same at spades. Y noted that A hesitated over letting B's double of 4-Hearts stand, so Y redoubled; just as Y expected, A bid 4-Spades and was doubled by Y.

Safe Bandaging

Never use anything but safety pins or adhesive tape to fasten the ends of a bandage. If you have not these on hand, tear the bandage back through the center several inches, tie the ends and then pass one end in one direction and the other end the other way around the injured member and tie together. Under no consideration use a plain pin for fastening a bandage.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Marcelling, properly accomplished, will not injure the hair. The skilled operator does not require a sizzling hot iron; the undulation toward a natural wave, an iron barely hot will stamp the lines more clearly. A hair net worn at night will preserve the curl.

Eyelids are of delicate tissues and should be well creamed at night when the face gets its supper of cosmetics. Pat in lightly. Place the first finger on the eyelid close to the nose, sweep outward half way to the hairline, come back under the eye. Every morning use cold water and apply witch hazel with a pad of cotton. When massaging be careful not to press upon the eyeball.

Tired eyes freshen under proper treatment. Bathe with hot water then with cold. Dissolve a teaspoonful of powdered boric acid in a cupful of boiling water, cool, and put on with an eyecup. Cold compresses at bedtime are invigorating. If tiredness continues, it is advisable to consult an eye specialist; vision may be impaired.

A sensitive skin that flares up under harsh winds needs generous meals of oily cosmetics. Powder acts as a protection against the elements, but must never be rubbed in vigorously with the powder pad if the skin surface is a victim of tantrums. Can't treat that kind of a skin with anything but gentleness. Use cream freely two or three times a day.

The gayest week in the whole year, Christmas week, is here. And the debs will be delighted with every moment of their holidays, filled to the last minute with teas, dances and dinners.

To begin with, tomorrow afternoon Eleanor and Margaret Mann will make their debut at a tea-dance their parents, the Rt. Rev. and Mrs. Alexander Mann, will give in the Longue Vue Country Club. And tomorrow night the Charles L. Doyles will present their daughter, Virginia, to society at a dance in the Allegheny Country Club.

Wednesday will bring another debut, that of Betty Kennedy, daughter of the John J. Kennedys, will make her bow at a dinner-dance her parents will give in the Pittsburgh Club.

Caroline Mitchell, daughter of the Harry L. Mitchells, will make her debut Christmas night at a dance her parents will give in the Twentieth Century Club.

The day after Christmas the Thomas A. Robinsons will give a dinner-dance in the Pittsburgh Golf Club to present to society Betsy Robinson.

Wedding Day Set

Elizabeth Browning Donner, daughter of the William H. Donners, of Camp Woods, Villanova, Pa., and Philadelphia, formerly of Pittsburgh, has named January 16 as the date of her marriage to Elliott Roosevelt, son of Governor and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York.

The ceremony will take place at 12:30 o'clock in the Church of the Redeemer, Bryn Mawr, followed by a wedding breakfast in the Donners' Camp Woods place. Following a wedding trip, Mr. Roosevelt and his bride will live in Park avenue, New York. Invitations to the wedding are being sent out now.

Wilkinsburg Juniors To Hear Yule Program

Juniors of the Wilkinsburg Woman's Club are anticipating their Christmas program tonight in the Y. W. C. A. Community House. William H. Oetting, of the Pittsburgh Musical Institute, has arranged the musical program, which will be the 1,098 recital given by the institute. It is to be presented by Ruth Parker, soprano; Roy Shoemaker, violin; Cass Ward Whitney, baritone, with Mr. Oetting at the piano.

In addition to this feature of the evening's entertainment, Mrs. W. H. Cadwallader, Jr., will review "Job," by Joseph Roth. Assisting Mrs. Richard Earle, as hostess, will be Mrs. R. W. Allison, Mrs. Robert West, Miss Margaret Orr, Miss Dorothy Covil, Mrs. W. S. Moore and Miss Josephine Stewart. Christmas colors will be carried out in the refreshments and decorations.

MISS CAROLYN PIERCE

Miss Pierce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Audley Pierce, also to dance in the "Doll Shop."

Science, Drama, Politics, Current Events Will Be Discussed At Morning Meetings

Those who will give the Monday morning lectures at the Twentieth Century Club next month are Robert A. Millikan, the scientist; Sir Norman Angell, member of the English House of Parliament; Dr. William Starr Meyers, of Princeton, and Dr. George Pierce Baker, of Yale. Mr. Millikan will speak on "The March of Science" on January 4; Sir Norman following him on the eleventh with "The Crisis in Democracy" as his subject. Dr. Meyers, of course, will discuss current events and Dr. Baker's topic for the concluding lecture is to be "The Drama as a Social Force."

In addition to the lectures, the calendar includes a recital on the seventh by Frederick Baer, baritone, under auspices of the music and arts committee; a current interests committee luncheon, on the fourteenth, which will be addressed by Frank R. Phillips, president of the Philadelphia Company, and a program by the drama committee.

Bridge Dinner

The Dormont College Club will give a bridge dinner next Monday at Haller's, Washington road, as the last social function of the club year.

The social committee, composed of Miss Jane Stitzer, chairman; Miss Mary Ryman, Miss Ann Gosset, Miss Evelyn Runger, Miss Edna Cunningham, Mrs. E. B. Fuller and Mrs. F. N. Groves, is in charge.

The Congress of Clubs is radiant with Christmas cheer, both inside and out, and from the first to the topmost floor. Small pine trees, gayly decorated with colored lights, adorn the window boxes. Red and silver predominate in the decorations with which the house committee, under Mrs. C. W. Whitsell and Mrs. H. G. Taylor's social-hospitality committee have given Congress house its festive appearance. An arch of arbor vitae, from which is suspended a large red star, gives an old-time Christmas spirit as does the large brightly decorated pine tree in the auditorium. There's a silver tree in the lounge with birds perched on its branches.

Frosted white bells are suspended from the chandeliers in the dining rooms and these with red and silver poinsettias and bits of holly are most effective as done under the supervision of Mrs. Milton C. Reno.

Wilson Luncheon

Miss Lida Baldridge is in charge of the music to be presented by the undergraduates at the Wilson College Club annual Christmas luncheon, in the Pittsburgh Athletic Association Annex, on Tuesday, December 29. These girls will carol: Miss Lida Baldridge, Miss Lillian Lewis, Miss Annabel Meyer, Miss Josephine Reel, Miss Rachel Kuhn, Miss Rebecca Loeffler, Miss Phyllis Rugg, Miss Virginia Brooks, Miss Pauline Biesinger, Miss Kathryn Rendleman, Miss Eleanor Kirtland, Miss Barbara Merrill and Miss Anna Smith, with Miss Elizabeth Meckling as accompanist.

* * *

"The Messenger," a playlet written by Mrs. Elmer Parker, will be presented by the author and Mrs. H. E. Davison at tomorrow's luncheon meeting of the Travelers' Club in the Congress of Clubs. Mrs. W. J. Barrie will furnish piano music and Mrs. G. W. Remensnyder will lead club caroling.

Outlet Issued

The first issue of the Congress "Outlet" under the new editor, Mrs. E. P. Schempp, has reached the members. The little magazine shows the same care and same amount of newsy interest that always characterized it under the editorial pen of Mrs. Ralph Davis. There's an especially fine article by Evelyn Gardiner Saudek, chairman of the home department, in which are many helpful suggestions for the homemaker. And Helen A. Bennett's "Echoes from the School of Physical Education" rates a good laugh.

The annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Modern Language Association will be held December 30 in Schenley High School. Dr. William Kamman, president of the Pittsburgh Association, will welcome the delegates and among the speakers will be Dr. Otto Muller, College of the City of New York; Dr. Leo Rockwell, Bucknell University; Dr. Coit R. Hoechst, University of Pittsburgh; Martin F. Miller, State College High School; Whitford H. Shelton, University of Pittsburgh, who is a vice president of the National Federation, and Miss Carmen Corriols, of Madrid, who will tell of the recent Spanish revolution as seen by a student in the University.

Students Arrive Home to Spend Holidays

Among the college students home for the Christmas holidays from Lake Erie College, Painesville, O., are Miss Jane Beatty, Ben Avon; Miss Mary Elizabeth Junkin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hays M. Junkin, of Bellevue; Miss Dorothy Luke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Luke, of Irwin, Pa.; Miss Margaret Read, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Read, Forbes Terrace; Miss Helen Robinson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. Q. Robinson, West Newton, Pa.; Miss Mary Jo Rodrigues, Bellevue, and Miss Jeanne Truter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Truter, of Mt. Oliver. The students will return to school January 4.

Mrs. James Stephen Martin, of Walnut street, is to entertain a family house party over the holidays. Her sister, "Miss Beulah Kennard, will arrive Thursday. Mrs. Martin's son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. and Mrs. Riffel Rhoton, of Annapolis, and Mrs. Rhoton's two children, Grace Anne and Harry Horsford, Jr., will be here until after New Year's Day.

* * *

Students of Mt. Mercy College will hold a Christmas formal dance in McAuley Hall Saturday night under the auspices of the monthly publication staff. The staff of The McAuleyan, student paper, will have charge of arrangements. Miss Irma Snelsire, editor-in-chief of the paper, has chosen her committee members. Miss Marguerite Manella and Miss Angela Laurent, reception; Miss Gertrude Coyne, Miss Alma Bradley and Miss Dolores Blotzer, refreshment; Miss Helen Greene, Miss Ruth Shannon, Miss Anne McMillen and Miss Nellie Manella, decorations.

Woman's City Club Gives Yule Musicale

One of the most charming Sunday musicale teas the Woman's City Club has ever had and one of the largest was the Christmas event held yesterday. The program of carols was beautifully done by the choral under Mrs. Taylor Allderdice's direction and was heard by about 400 guests. Solos by Mrs. Winifred Perry and quartet numbers gave diversity to the program.

The club rooms are dressed for the holidays and presented a colorful picture yesterday. Two tea tables were set, one in the tea room and one in the lounge. The latter was centered with silver fruit on a mirror and was presided over by Mrs. T. Clifton Jenkins and Mrs. H. S. Wherrett. The tea room table was done in red and white with a centerpiece of holly and poinsettia and white tapers. Mrs. D. J. Kennedy and Mrs. Biddle Arthurs were the pourers there. Mrs. E. Bruce Hill and Mrs. Clarke Hammond were in charge.

BLACK GAINING PROMINENCE FOR WINTER EVENING WEAR

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Dec. 21.—Black is black in its prominent place on the evening color card, that is, if it has ever been absent. For there are many smart women who wear black o' nights in preference to any other hue. True, one does not see quite so much black in the ballroom as one did formerly. But at fashionable restaurants and clubs, black is extremely popular again, with much white also in the picture. These two hues seem to be most favored for formal wear at night, with some red, green and blue also on view. White provides the ethereal quality and black the sophistication, no other colors being quite so successful in conveying either of the two qualities so precious to women. And so, even if several houses did not feature black in that section devoted to the evening mode, it looks as if they had to yield to the demands of their clientele and fashion lovely black frocks for their mid-season showings or to private order. All sorts of materials are used, ranging from velvet and taffeta to lace and net.

MANY OF THE smartest people are patronizing the Grand Vatel, long famed for its food, and now done over in a very modernistic manner. The dresses depicted here were sketched there. Both are black and both are very representative of the frocks worn at that resort. First comes what is unmistakably a Bruyere model. It is in black taffeta with a new bodice. The wide shoulder straps, which cross in back, are cut in one piece with the front of the bodice, with an odd little insert, a fan-shaped piece inserted in front of the decolletage. The extremely wide and bouffant skirt has a close hip yoke. A real bustle with a ruched top passing beneath the belt marks this model as of the new season. Beneath the bustle are wide loops of taffeta which end in long sash ends, reaching nearly to the hem. At the front of the belt is a stiff little bow-knot of strass.

THE OTHER MODEL, also worn at a gala dinner at the Grand Vatel, is in black crepe romain. The little ruffled capelets at the top of each arm strike a decidedly feminine note which is repeated in the trailing line of ruffles of the skirt, and, in fact, of the skirt itself which also trails. A large soft bow at the base of the decolletage in back suggests the bustle without committing itself so frankly as in so many of this winter's models.

GOOD SUPPORT :-: Two 'Box-Office' Men for Star :-: AMUSEMENTS :-: News and Views About Theatrical Events

Studio Endeavors to Make Tallulah Bankhead's New Film a Hit

BY HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 21.

It Tallulah Bankhead's next picture isn't a hit, it won't be for lack of a strong supporting cast.

Reports spread along the Hollywood grapevine today that Paramount will star the star both Clive Brook and Paul Lukas as her leading men. She couldn't ask for a more lustrous gentility to uphold these actors in very prestige at the box office.

Clive Brook

Unless otherwise tions developed, Tallulah's picture will be "Thunder Below," a South American story by Theodore Rourke. The star's heroine is the wife of an engineer stationed in the tropics.

Though the star still has to give her final okay, she has expressed satisfaction with the story to date.

Richard Wallace will direct and the cameras will be unlimbered in three or four weeks.

Having furnished the star with three mediocre vehicles, Paramount is exerting every effort to make the fourth time the charm.

The other night Harry Brand saw one of those western serials with the covered wagons.

"You've got to admire the enthusiasm of the forty-niners," he said, "but if they'd only waited 82 years, all the roads would have been paved."

GATHER AROUND, IT'S GOSSIP

Some pressure was brought to bear on Dorothy Lee so she'll play that role in "Girl Crazy" after all. Radio will give another good part to Rochelle Hudson, who has agreed to step into the breach. Ben Lyon will entertain 110 guests at the Hollywood opening of Bebe Daniels in "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney." Saw several film celebrities at the Biltmore Bird revue Ivan Lebedeff, alone. Josef Von Sternberg with another man. Glimpsed Clara Beranger. The first X-mas card to reach my desk is from Joe Brown. Edward Everett Horton is reviving Dion Boucicault's "Con the Shaughran" for his new stage venture. Had lunch with him at Levy's and he has high hopes of the production. Laura La Plante and Ruth Weston are in the case. Saw James Cagney at a nearby table.

Tom Mix left the hospital Saturday. Jack Gilbert gave a party for Lupe Velez the other evening. If Frank Fay really wants to know, I'm neither a paper-bag putter-away or a string-saver. Anybody will tell you I'm a paper-clip hoarder. Ruth Nagle took the train to Washington to spend Christmas with Conrad. Enid Bennett went along as a traveling companion and will continue on to Europe. R-K-O's "Frontier" has been postponed for 60 days. Story isn't ready.

Movie Stars Helpful to Santa

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 21.—AP.—Salary cuts, actual or expected, have not changed Hollywood's will to give to Christmas cheer. Movie stars who have felt the pinch of economy are doing no retrenching in their Christmas charities. On the contrary, Hollywood's traditional generosity is being stretched this year to cover extra needs.

Hollywood, which blares its other virtues and eccentricities from the rooftops, is reticent concerning its charities. Stars who will talk freely of their "love-lives," their latest divorce or newest dream girl, will lapse into silence when asked what they are doing to help in those less fortunate.

But without exception they are doing much, and a little sounding reveals a few of the stars' hobbies and plans for Christmas.

HELP INSTITUTIONS

Maurice Chevalier's pet charity, like that of Marion Davies, is a public institution. He maintains the Dispensaire Chevalier in Paris, for the care of actors and their families. Miss Davies will call on fellow-players to help her entertain the crippled children of the clinic which she supports, where 6,000 poor children are treated annually.

The motion picture relief fund this year is increased greatly by the new studio agreement that every employe shall give one-half of 1 per cent of his salary. The Los Angeles community chest takes from the studios, including all players and other employes, a quota of $200,000 for 1931.

Aside from generously contributing time to personal appearances for Yule benefits, the stars have pet Christmas hobbies.

REMEMBERS OLD FRIENDS

Marie Dressler doesn't talk about it, but the friends of her old days, some of whom are down and out now, are generously remembered with checks and baskets.

Among the players who will be making personal Christmas expeditions with baskets and cheer will be Dolores Del Rio, Frances Dee, Ricardo Cortez, William Blakewell and Mary Astor.

The Christmas work of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, like their other charities, is strictly anonymous, but it is known that their regular monthly check to the city's largest "bread line" is doubled at Christmas, and this is just one of their gifts.

TARS NOT FORGOTTEN

Many foreign-born actors seek out needy fellow-countrymen of Los Angeles and vicinity. Ivan Lebedeff will be an unofficial Santa Claus for many Russian exiles in Hollywood. Ramon Novarro searches out poor folk in the Mexican colony. Jean Hersholt similarly remembers Danish families.

George Sidney and Charlie Murray may be co-starred in a stage play in Los Angeles. Their next in the C & K series will be "The Cohens and Kellys in Hollywood." Barbara Kent, whose latest role is in support of Marie Dressler in "Emma," has been ill of influenza. The film, "Outward Bound," has just been shown in Dallas, Tex., 18 months after its release, and was so well received that it will be repeated after the holidays. Boris Karloff, the monster of "Frankenstein," has won a long-term contract, under which "The Suicide Club" likely will be his first picture. Joe Smith and Charlie Dale, of the Avon Comedy Four of old vaudeville days, [illegible] stars and the [illegible] del, Inc.," on the stage, will be in Hollywood shortly to do the latter for the fillims.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

You've got just five days in which to shop for seats for a Christmas show. The only one in town on the legitimate stage will be "The Vinegar Tree," which opens in the Alvin Friday as one of our Yuletide festivities, with Mary Boland as the principal tree decoration. It will remain over the other great seasonal holiday, New Year's Day. Tickles from today on, are at the b. o.

What Ho!

Norma Shearer stands a-peering at something or other in this scene from "Private Lives," which comes to the Penn on Christmas Day.

'Tis War, Not Peace, in Warner

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

The season of peace on earth and good will to man brings another movie war to the Warner. It is titled "Surrender," and it features Warner Baxter. He's a Frenchman this time.

The drama develops into a conflict between patriotism and love. A French soldier and an aristocratic fraulein fall in love. And this, in any circumstances, makes a situation.

The horrors of a German prison camp are present. Bloodhounds go on the human chase as they did in old "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The only thing missing is the ice.

The picture, somehow, isn't THERE, though it has a good cast and good direction. Sometimes, however, the direction seems to carry the story in opposite directions.

Much of the action is laid in one of those big German castles, fenced in by stone walls and iron. Prussian traditions.

Mr. Baxter spends a good deal of time playing electrician. A prisoner of war, he is assigned by his captors to wire the old castle. Which makes it nice because Leila Hyams is there.

FILM MUSICIANS END STRIKE

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—A compromise agreement between the Stanley-Warner Company and the musicians' union was reached in New York, it was announced by William Goldman, Philadelphia theater manager, and 110 musicians accordingly will return to work Christmas Day.

The musicians left their jobs in motion picture theaters here September 6 at the expiration of the 1931 agreement. At that time the theater company sought to reduce its orchestra personnel to 100, while the union sought reemployment of 150 musicians.

In return for the company's concession in agreeing to hire 110 musicians, Goldman said, the union will permit undisclosed adjustments in pay for overtime and rehearsals. The basic wage was not at issue in the dispute.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: Several calls concerning your Ripley para in Thursday's . . . The item about all the 2s on that Nebraska check, made out and cashed on Feb. 22, 1922 . . . The complainants pointed out that Nebraska doesn't celebrate or recognize Washington's birthday as being legal, etc. . . . I inspected the 1931 World Almanac and on page 70 that authority asserts Washington's Birthday (Feb. 22) "is a legal holiday in all the states (territories and possessions)"

So we're right again, unless of course, Nebraska didn't in 1922 . . . You might spank the wrists of that movie star who crushed a lot of dept. store shop girls yesterday because the girls who were awed by her presence stared at her. She squelched them with "What are you looking at, you morons?"

She's a friend of yours . . . so I'll betcha six-bits you won't.

If I were one of the shop girls you can take it from Mrs. Cambridge's little girl Ruth that my snapper would have been: "At a movie star who is pretty good, but not nearly so good as she thinks she is!" . . . If you don't use it I'll get it printed elsewhere, so there!

I C. sent you a long letter regarding something he wrote to a stock brokerage . . . Thought he was so sore at you? . . . I returned it . . . As Dave Alber says: "A Winchelephant never forgets." . . . Louis Reis, of the Bronx Chamber of Commerce, called: To tell you that none of you are right on that line, viz: "I hope all your children become acrobats!" . . . It should go this way, Reis says: "I hope all your children become acrobats and have to open the show—before the customers get their gloves off!" . . . That's the funniest version yet.

H. B. Trehee, who was elected to the Kiwanis Club in that tiny town out West is the same Trehee whose sig was on all the currency at one time or don't you care? . . . An injun and a popular fellow . . . Dick O'Brien's simile is good—Ridiculous as Kate Smith singing "All of Me" . . . You recently twitted those screen stars who bone the English in films . . . In "The Man in Her Life" . . . Lois Moran chirped: "After what you've did" . . . That chap is coming in with the proof that what you said about that football referee penalizing that team on purpose until they lost . . . is true . . . It's bound to break—so let it—and then let's brag at that time, huh?"

Morton Downey reopens at the Casino in the Park Chewsday . . . If you can't make it, may I? . . . Irwin called—about a week in Cleveland . . . Explained . . . The Paramount (Bklyn) billing reads: "Russ Columbo—'The Cheat'" . . . Do those theater booking men do that on purpose to get it in print like this? . . . The day you itemed about the Vice Cop who prosecuted Mrs. Hammerstein dying from nacheral causes—the Police Dept's Missing Person's List included her name . . . The ex-Mrs. Marshall Field who only gets a million smackers per annum yellimony has opened her own millinery shop . . . Wonder if J. P. Morgan's will give any bonuses this Christmas—talk says no . . . Tyson's lists "Mourning Becomes Electra" under Comedies! . . . The Dec. 4th M. P. Herald contained a big ad on Tibbett's "Cuban Love Song" . . . It displayed, too, the crowds in front of the Roxy to see that flicker—and all the gents in the photo were wearing straw hats! . . . Tell EHG that's what comes of starting those composite photographs. Friedman phoned to tell you that for Xmas bonuses this year the bosses are giving away their businesses with no takers.

Anthony called—to tell you that the Gandy-Handy gag you liked in his newest rival's mag is a steal—as is the entire text of that new echo . . . So I said: "Very funny, Norman—considering how you ribbed Walter when he used to complain about his pirates" . . . I also asked him: "How does it feel to sweat digging up things, and see an army of burglars get away with it?" so he couldn't think of an answer so I said s'long . . . Oh, yes, he did say that he and his staff haven't forgotten that your one line did much to help sell out the first issue, and now his mag is in the million and a half division . . . That Murray Lachmann who testified in the Erlanger-Mrs. Fixel case has embarrassed Marc Lachman very much—all Broadway assumed the papers meant Marc—so straighten it out like a good boy.

Here's a hot one—Gandhi made a remark recently which few papers played up . . . He said: "Even in tropical India women would never dream of appearing on the streets half dressed as they do in London." . . . Look, who's talkin'! . . . Ananias Berry, of the Berry Brothers (he's the one who does the strut), you remember him from the Cotton Club—was secretly married to Valaida, the girl orchestra conductor in Lew Leslie's "Rhapsody in Black" show . . . Happened Friday at Media, Pa.

Oh, yes: Mrs. Margaret Judge, former wardrobe lady of various night clubs, had a bad accident and is at the Fordham Hosp. . . . Tell the boys she's destitute and to kick in . . . Did you see Jimmy Quirk's posey? . . . And here's the most popular cocktail in New York. The stay-up-lates now snub The Old-Fashioned and the other cocktails since meeting it . . . Called the Coffee Cocktail—¼ port, ¼ brandy, one whole raw egg, little or no sugar. Plenty grand. Called The Coffee Cocktail because it looks like Java when shaken well . . . Two of 'em—and—if you try to say "Truly Rural" it comes out "Trooey Roor!" Oh-KAY! WINCH-YELL!!!—r. c.

DOLL LADY

Is Spreading a World of Sunshine With

the Most Glorious of All Dolls

Important Notice — Owing to the tremendously big demand from little girls of Pittsburgh and vicinity, the "Honeybunch" distribution has been extended until New Year's Day.

Read the Doll Lady's Message Today:—

Dear Little Girls:

What a Sunday! Never before in my life have I put in one like it. I kept my headquarters open to take care of the rush and scores of little girls were in to get their "Honeybunch." I am mighty glad that the Sun-Telegraph is going to let me stay here until New Year's so that none of the little girls who got a late start will be disappointed. I'll tell the world that my headquarters is going to be a busy place until Christmas Eve because I have notified hundreds of little girls to come in and get their dolly.

It isn't too late to get a "Honeybunch." Write to me today and I'll tell you just what you have to do. You may not get her before Christmas, but she'll be just as welcome before the New Year. There are plenty of dolls left and my doll workers are going to work right up to Christmas for me so that there will be no disappointments.

I have been so dreadfully busy that I haven't much time to write about "Honeybunch," but you can rest assured that she's the most beautiful big doll you ever saw. Every little girl who gets one falls right in love with her.

Here are the names of some of the little girls in Pittsburgh who have already taken "Honeybunch" home for a playmate:

Florence Spiegel, 11 Wossner St.; Janet Marks, 19 Boggs Ave.; Ga[illegible] Thompson, 22 Fernando St.; Amelia Walni, 32 Harlan Ave.; Catherine Harris, 41 Vine St.; Bessie Broidy, 43 Strauss St.; Rose Marie Downey, 95 Fountain St.; Margaret Casper, 109 N. Millvale Ave.; Marjorie A. Finemann, 216 Dinwiddie St.; Mildred Griffin, 242 Robinson St.; Nancy Payne, 246 Phillips Ave.; Olga Harney, 301 Warfield St.; Jean H. Major League Expenses. Greenleaf Reigns Again. No Bluffing by Gibson. Carey Still Seeks Deal. Tigers' Leanest Years. Slump in Basketball.

HEYDLER EXPLAINS KEEPING UP PRICES

IN REPLY TO fandom's natural inquiry as to why, when they were voting to slash salaries and reduce player limits in order to cut down their own operating expenses, the baseball magnates of the major loops failed to say anything about lowering the admission rates, John A. Heydler, National League president, says that changed conditions incidental to the growth of the game during the last quarter of a century do not warrant cheaper ball.

John A. Heydler

Heydler remarks that 25 years ago a patron had to pay 75 cents for a seat in a wooden grandstand. For the same vantage point in a modern plant costing from $1,000,000 to $3,000,000, the charge is now $1, general admission, with an additional assessment for reserved or box seats. The circuit head declares that this increase of 25 cents for general grandstand admission cannot be termed gouging the public, and that it doesn't begin to offset the tremendous overhead that the National League has carried during the last 10 years.

"MANAGERS AND PLAYERS of clubs in our league last season drew more than $2,000,000 in salaries," Heydler says, "whereas 25 years ago the total payroll for a single campaign averaged less than $300,000, or about $100,000 for each club. In addition to the increased pay received by managers and players the clubowners were confronted this year with higher railroad and Pullman fares, hotel bills, money paid for new players, income and real estate taxes, rentals and salaries of executives.

"The upkeep of some of our parks amounted to $1,000 a game to open the gates. Up to midsummer, our games received as much patronage as during the same period in 1930. But as the pennant race narrowed down to the first division teams and a runaway by the St. Louis Cardinals, the attendance fell off about 15 per cent. Some of the clubs that were distanced found it extremely difficult to avoid losses, while others did not derive the usual profits.

"WITH THE FUTURE shrouded in doubt, because of the prolonged business depression, the clubowners in both major leagues were forced to retrench. Reducing the players' salaries was imperative, while the adoption of the 23-man limit was put through for the purpose of giving the weaker clubs opportunities to obtain some good players from the stronger ones.

"Even now the National League has not been relieved of an overhead that may spell disaster for some of the clubs next year. But we are willing to take our chances. Baseball has been through many trials and tribulations, yet the clubowners invariably have taken their medicine without calling for help."

THOUGH RALPH GREENLEAF, winner of the world pocket billiard championship for the eleventh time since 1919, has captured that title more frequently than any other player in history, the time record for holding it still belongs to Alfredo DeOro. The latter took turns with Albert Frey in wearing the crown in 1887-8-9, was the undisputed king from 1890 to 1900, inclusive, and came back to win twice again in 1904 and 1911. But they were not holding annual tournaments in the early days and DeOro did not have to defend his honors as often as Greenleaf. In a broad sense, therefore, Greenleaf has surpassed the achievements of all other pocket experts in history. His domination of the game during the greater part of the last 12 years is comparable to Willie Hoppe's long reign at balkline.

Adam Comorosky

BEFORE ANNOUNCING HIS decision to keep Adam Comorosky in a Pirate suit next year, Manager George Gibson made no secret of the fact that he was willing to entertain a deal for Commy, but Max Carey, Brooklyn pilot, gives Gibson credit for not following the lead of other skippers and demanding terms beyond reason for his player.

As a general rule, when a manager knows another club wants one of his men he demands about half the other club in exchange. Gibson knew Brooklyn wanted Comorosky, but Carey says he didn't try any hold-up stuff. Failing to get an offer that suited him he simply announced that he would keep the Polish outfielder and made no attempt at bluffing for the sake of publicity.

CAREY FOUND OTHER managers different. Besides Comorosky, he tried to get Hack Wilson, Taylor Douthit, Wally Roettger, Wesley Schulmerich or Joe Stripp, but says the price demanded by every club except Pittsburgh included Babe Herman, Dazzy Vance or two or three of Brooklyn's other stars.

Max hasn't given up hope of making a trade with Bill McKechnie. He'd like to get Wally Berger, as would every other manager, but realizes there is little chance in that direction and may try to swing a deal for Schulmerich instead.

THAT PRINCETON IS considering departing from the graduate coaching system in football and engaging an outside mentor for next season to succeed Al Wittmer, resigned, is the result of the leanest three-year period the Tigers have ever known on the gridiron. In 1929 they lost only to the Navy, but in three consecutive seasons since they have won only four games all told, and three of those four victories were scored over Amherst. The only other team to be defeated during that period was Lehigh. Of 18 other games played 16 were lost and two ended in ties.

JOHNNY FREUND, pioneer basketball showman of this district, rises to ask what has happened to the independent, semi-pro and pro floor game hereabouts. He follows up with his own answer to the question and says it is because the colleges have stolen the show.

The veteran wonders at the absence of teams to compare with the Coffeys, Morrys, Ameritas, Butler and others of just a few years back, observing that the last two seasons were the first in a long time in which this section was not represented by at least one top-notch quintet.

"OF COURSE, WE still have the Duquesne Lafayettes," Freund continues, "but they do not rank with any of the famous teams that Joe Goldman put on the floor.

Johnny Freund

"They will miss their capable coach, Ed Minnick, if reports that he is not to be with them are true, but they should have easy sailing against any other team in the Pittsburgh district at this time.

"WHEN A REASON is sought for the total absence of high-class fives it may all be summed up in one item — lack of promotion. That's what we lack here. I don't believe we have one live promoter left in the district. If we have, he surely is keeping under cover. Semi-pro and pro basketball, with proper promotion, has always been successful around Pittsburgh and should be at present in spite of the depression if the fans had not become tired of going to games that were not started until an hour after the time scheduled and that were played in poorly hitted halls, lacking proper accommodations for the spectators. The amusement-seeking public is accustomed to better things today, and basketball promoters have failed to keep up with the trend."

TECH VICTIM OF LAST-HALF RALLIES

GAMES TONIGHT

Dartmouth vs. Syracuse at Syracuse.

Northwestern vs. Notre Dame at South Bend.

Pittsburgh breaks into Christmas week today with only half its Yuletide shopping accomplished and with a headache of basketball regrets. The regrets are sprinkled principally about the campuses at Pitt and Carnegie Tech where last week, the touring varsity basketball squads of the institutions failed to set the world on fire with their accomplishments in the South and Middle West.

Carnegie's Tartans arrived home yesterday after a disastrous trip into Kentucky and Ohio and will start preparations this afternoon for the meeting here with Yale Wednesday night.

PITT DROPS THREE

Dr. Carlson's hopefuls dropped three out of four games played last week, bowing to Wisconsin, Purdue and Butler and nosing out Indiana in an extra-period session. Carnegie, boasting an extremely formidable squad, whipped Kentucky Wesleyan with ease, but took successive jolts on the lug from Kentucky University and St. Xavier College, of Cincinnati.

Tech was the victim of second-half rallies by both Kentucky U and Xavier. Playing only a single game this week, the Tartans can gain a 50-50 rating by landing a victory here Wednesday against Yale, but the Panthers must take two out of three from Kansas and then beat Colorado in order to hit the Pacific Coast with a .500 batting average.

The Tipoff

Your correspondent served as assistant coach with Lobo DeMeolo of the Bloomery All Star gang at West View yesterday, which probably accounts for the scoreless deadlock. The only suggestion I made was that Lobo put Josh Williams in the ball game in the second half in the place of the corpulent Hood, who shoots, but surely was becoming tired. Josh went in and made our hook swell by promptly fumbling.

Jap Douds, who all-Americaned for Wash. Jeff and has been playing backing into ball for the past two years, may make a pro of a coaching connection in the East for next fall. He is being considered as a line coach at one of the seaboard's best known institutions of learning and football.

Allan Holman, who played a snappy brand of football for Ohio State and now rides for Pitt's Franklin and Marshall polo team, plays polo like he did football—hard and with a dash. He hits and rides for all he's worth, and the broad-shouldered former Buckeye never will be found on a bargain counter.

Joe Kelcher, former Peabody High School football star, is home for Christmas vacation from Georgetown University, where he starred as a freshman grinder. Joe, a brother of the famous Babe Kelcher of Duquesne University tackle and guard fame, has taken on added necessary poundage and a gob of valuable experience.

According to reports from the East, the betting the day before the Yale-Princeton game was 10 to 7 that Princeton wouldn't even show up.—Ed CARVER.

Baltimore Loyola Without an Injury

BALTIMORE, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The 1931 football season, which cost more than two-score lives throughout the country, was completed by Loyola College, of Baltimore, without an injury, according to the coach Walter A. Comerford.

"I have not had so much as to bandage an ankle," he said, commenting on the season just closed, "and the schedule was most severe in the history of the college."

RENEW RELATIONS

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Dec. 21.—After several years in which there have been no athletic relations between New Castle High and Ellwood City, negotiations have been completed for the resumption of athletic competition between the two institutions. The football teams will meet here December 21, 1932.

Hear J. J. Long Over WCAE Tonight

James J. Long, famous sports columnist of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, will be on the air tonight.

At 6:30 Mr. Long will be heard in his weekly Sports Review over Station WCAE, of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

All of the readers of this newspaper are familiar with the interesting sports comment that adorns the daily column of Mr. Long. His radio talk is similarly crammed with interesting information and observations. To be fully informed on sports, you have to be one of his weekly listeners and daily readers.

On Wednesday night, the first Sports Quiz, conducted by members of the sports staff of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, will be heard over Station WCAE. It is scheduled for 7 o'clock. Harry Keck, sports editor, will be master of ceremonies, and others who will answer questions submitted by readers will include Jess Carver, Carl Shatto, Julius Levin and Tom Birks. If you have any questions you would like to have answered, send them in to the Sports Quiz editor.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF LAST SATURDAY: WATER WILL CUT STEEL—In the research laboratories of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company at East Pittsburgh, Pa., it has been found that a tiny spray of water can be made to cut the hardest steel, and that metals will yield under a pull just like taffy or cold tar—a process known as the "fatigue of metals." By attaching a small steel plug to the edge of a disc, which revolves at the rate of 20,000 revolutions per minute, with a huge iron cover over the whole apparatus, the metal is gnawed in two in a few minutes. Stainless iron and nickel last four minutes, stellite (famous for its hardness) lasts 10 minutes, and iron nitride (almost diamond hard) lasts about 15 minutes. One of these machines will be exhibited in the "Believe It or Not Hall of Curiosities" in New York City. THE GUN BARRELL FENCE—During the War of 1812, residents of Georgetown, District of Columbia, were called upon by the government to give financial aid against the advance of the British, who threatened the Capitol. Rueben Daw, a wealthy trader, contributed generously, and after the war—since there was no money to bacy back the loans—contributors were invited to go to the Navy Yard and help themselves to whatever they fancied. Daw, in good spirits, chose a pile of old flint-locks and had them sent to his home. The barrels of the guns were used for pickets in the construction of a fence, which still stands in front of the old Daw home in Georgetown.

COOPER WINS $4,000 OPEN

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Harry Cooper returned to championship form here yesterday to win the Pasadena $4,000 open tournament, with a sparkling 72-hole card of 281, three under par.

The Chicago pro showed an almost complete mastery of the new heavier ball and the rugged Brookside course, with its par of 71, to annex the $1,000 first place money.

Harry charged to the front in the second round Saturday with a 67, four under par, and never was headed.

Seven strokes behind came Wiffy Cox, Brooklyn professional, who scored 288 for $600 in prize money. Fred Morrison, of Culver City, Cal., was third, a stroke behind Cox, with 289. His reward was $400.

Detroit pros, Ralph Guldahl and the veteran Walter Hagen, tied for fourth with 290. Their earnings were $325 each. Sixth place resulted in a tie between Ray Mangrum, Los Angeles, and Eddie Loos, Chicagoan, with cards of 291.

SPORT VIGNETTES

In the beginning, college sports were intended for the entertainment and physical benefit of the students . . . Through the years they have been developed for the enjoyment of the multitudes who throng the stands in the vast stadia . . . Is this change responsible for the many evils that mark the games today? . . . Would we be better off if we gave the sports back to the students, to whom they belonged in the beginning?

I was talking with Jimmy Rooney, former Pitt star back and punter, now the leader of the independent team that bears his name and dominates the local sandlot situation . . . I asked him how he accounted for the fact that the Rooneys outclass the field . . . I wanted to know if it was because the team trained better, practiced more than the others and was made up almost entirely of former college players.

Rooney laughed . . . "We seldom practice," he said . . . "And we do very little training . . . And the best player on the team never wore the spangles for a college team and doesn't know what it is to train . . . Most of us are continuing in the sport because we like to play . . . Our method is to get together on the day of the game and take the field . . . When we get the ball, we huddle and I call the play and we go places . . . When we need some yardage, we give the ball to Mose Kelsch, the warhorse of the sandlots . . . Time after time we have given him the ball on play after play and he has proved unstoppable . . . Always good for a yard or two or three or five or 10 . . . I have seen him march down the field 40 or 60 yards in short, consistent gains for scores time after time . . . He is the best natural football player I ever have seen . . . On the line we have Mose Lantz, the former Grove City College star, who can do anything a lineman should be able to do, and do it all afternoon . . . You might almost say that these two Moses—Kelsch and Lantz—have led us out of the bullrushes to two Conference titles . . . Of course, there are others on the team, but most of us just go through the motions.

"Training and condition? . . . As I look back on my college days, I realize now that many a time I went out on the field all tightened up physically and mentally and unable to do myself justice . . . Put through rigid and bruising training day after day, I felt so stiff when game time arrived that my uniform seemed to be too tight on my body and I felt as if I would like to rip it away . . . Now it is different . . . I am my own natural self and enjoy the playing . . . Perhaps I am not tuned up for a hard, battering contest, but I get a kick out of playing the game for the game's sake . . . It is an entirely different sensation."

There you have the testimony of a man who has played football in high school, college and on the sandlots . . . For the first time he is really enjoying himself as a player carrying on although he is

BRADDOCK HIGH MANAGER DIES

Russell Hanson, 15-year-old assistant student manager of the track team at Braddock High School died early yesterday morning, following a lingering illness which first took effect last July. His death took place in Mercy Hospital; he is the fifth Braddock student to dies this year, although three others were girls.

Funeral services will be held in his late home at 200 Penn avenue, Braddock, on Wednesday, with burial in Monongahela Cemetery.

Hanson last year earned his school letter in the band in which he played the trumpet. Schoolmates will attend the funeral.

Three to Direct Eastern League

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Clubowners and officials of the Eastern Baseball League meeting here yesterday, voted to entrust the league's affairs next year to an executive committee of three members, rather than elect a president.

The three chosen to rule the organization were Fred J. Voos, Jr., of Bridgeport, chairman; Dave Driscoll, of Hartford, and Gene Martin, of New Haven, all club presidents. A similar committee, composed of five members was successful in conducting the league last season.

FRENCH, MAPLES WIN

SOUTHERN PINES, N. C., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Emmett French, Youngstown (O.) professional, and Ellis Maples, Alapines (Ala.) Club pro, defeated George T. Dunlap, of New York, intercollegiate champion, and Dick Wilson, former Georgetown University golf star, in a benefit exhibition golf match here yesterday for the relief of Southern Pines unemployed. The match ended 4 and 3.

20,000 ATTEND PANTHER TILTS IN WEST

By H. C. Carlson

PITT BASKETBALL COACH

Written Exclusively for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 21.—Here we are to play Kansas tonight, following that overtime, 23-20, defeat by Butler at Indianapolis, Saturday night. It is the first of a three-game series.

Dr. H. C. Carlson

Ever onward, with new fields to conquer is reminiscent of a visit to Scott High, and it is apropos of this Pitt basketball trip, as well as in other activities. It is true that the score has been against us three times, but the games have been so attractive that our hosts have been more than anxious to have us return.

ATTRACT 20,000 FANS

To attract more than 20,000 fans in one week is something these days and while we are just as keen as ever to win, it is written in the book of life, not who won, but how you played.

A resume will show that the element of luck saliently entered three games and in the fourth game we were away off, while Purdue had a big night. Wisconsin impresses somehow, and had we maintained our form of that game we would have had a better record. The games, aside from Butler, were considerably more bruising than in our section, and the opposition always more mature.

HEARTBREAKER

The outstanding social event of the week was Willie Kowallis going around with Miss America of 1930—in a revolving door.

All of the heartbreaks of Pitt's trip happened in the last three minutes of Saturday's game and centered around Don Smith.

With Butler one point ahead, Don received a pass from Lawry, and, as he was shooting, he was charged from the rear, but was allowed to shoot one chance, which he made. Then, on a fast dribble, Smith put Pitt ahead by two points. On the following play he dribbled in and his shot rolled around the ring and was recovered by Butler and converted into the tying score.

Smith then dribbled into the basket and was apparently fouled, but Butler got a second foul shot with the score tied and converted the second into the winning point, followed by a long field goal to widen the margin. Lawry was mowed down beneath just before the game ended, but was not allowed to shoot.

BUFF MAY GO TO ST. FRANCIS

Aldo (Buff) Donnelli, erstwhile Duquesne University football captain, freshman coach for the Dukes for the last two years and noted soccer-football star, may be signed as head grid coach at St. Francis College, Loretta, Pa., it has been learned.

While Elmer Daily, athletic director at St. Francis, has admitted Donnelli's name is on file for the job, he also points out the fact that the present tutor, Gene Stringer, will not be free of his present contract for another year.

Donnelli graduated from Duquesne in 1930, after having played four years of football there, having been captain for the last two seasons. With the arrival of Elmer Layden as head coach, he was moved from the center of the line to the backfield, where he proved scintillant.

Buff's work as coach of the freshman team has been commendable, and it is not anticipated that Duke athletic authorities will stand in the way of advancement for him.

George Stocking Killed by Auto

Members of the Keystone A. C. and squash racquet enthusiasts of this city are mourning the death of George L. Stocking, former K. A. C. club champion and one of the ranking players of the district, who was killed in an automobile accident in Philadelphia last Friday.

Stocking, who won the K. A. C. title first in 1928, lost it to McCook Reed in '29 and regained it last year. He was a former Nebraska state tennis champion and one of the leading amateur golfers of that state.

The deceased sportsman had been connected with a local department store, but removed to Philadelphia last year. His home was at 328 Calvert street, Merion, Pa.

The Castle Shannon Juniors qualified to meet the Akron Goodyears in the fourth round of the National amateur cup at Akron January 13 by defeating the Heidelberg Juniors, 7 goals to 0, before 3,000 fans at South Park yesterday.

It was a repeated game. The teams tied at 2-all at Heidelberg a week ago.

The first goal came after 30 minutes. A cross from the wing found Miscalla in position, and he headed the ball into the net.

In the second half S. Kevisk scored from a scrimmage in the Heidelberg goalmouth. Urbanic having little chance to save.

S. Kuten was ordered off the field by Referee Lumsden for rough play. M. Kuten, the visiting fullback, was easily the best man on the field.

In other soccer games, Morgan swamped Gallatin, 6 to 0, in the Keystone League, and Dunlevy beat Hill Crest, 4 to 0, in the Monongahela loop.

In the Panhandle League, Grove stopped Primrose, 4 to 0. Curry nosed out Coverdale, 1 to 0; the J. J. Veronas had a scoring bee with F. W. Scotts winning, 10 to 0. Moon Run kept its leadership intact at the expense of Sturgeon, 3 to 1. Cuddy and Cedar Grove battled to a 1-1 tie, and Gladden topped Houston, 2 to 1.

Castle Shan.		Heidelberg
Branko	G	Urbanic
Barnatti	L. B.	M. Kuten
S. Kevisk	R. B.	Bolesz

Goals—Miscalla, S. Kevisk. Referee—Lumsden.

LAWRY LEADS SCORERS

Tim Lawry, University of Pittsburgh star forward, is leading the local collegiate basketball scorers with the season still in its infancy. He has a total of 41 points, six more than Willie Kowallis, his teammate, who is runner-up with 35 points.

Jagnow, Carnegie Tech satellite, is third, with 32 points in three games for a fine average of more than 10 per contest. Lawry's fine foul-shooting has assisted in boosting his average. The leaders:

Southeastern League To be Reorganized

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The Southeastern League, which a year ago was disbanded, has been resurrected as representatives of five Southern cities voted to reorganize it into an eight-club baseball circuit. Final reorganization is set for January 18.

The five cities represented were Selma, Ala.; Columbus, Ga.; Pensacola, Fla.; Jackson, Miss., and Montgomery.

Invitations will be extended to Anniston and Mobile, Ala.; Meridian, Miss., and Macon, Ga.

Local Rifle Team, Butler Meet Tonight

Butler and P. R. R. copped Keystone Rifle League matches on Saturday. The Port Pitt team, of Pittsburgh, opposes the Victory Club, of Butler, tonight, at Butler, Pa.

Butler won from Tarentum Sportsmen, 1293 to 1209, in their contest at Tarentum Saturday. William Mier having high gun, with 189 points, while P. R. R. bumped Standard Steel, 1223 to 1222, at Verona. Capt. O. V. Brush leading with 188 points.

Should we give the sport back to the boys, or continue on with this Frankenstein we have created to run amuck for large gates in the large stadia at the expense of countless injuries, fatal and otherwise, to vigorous growing boys?

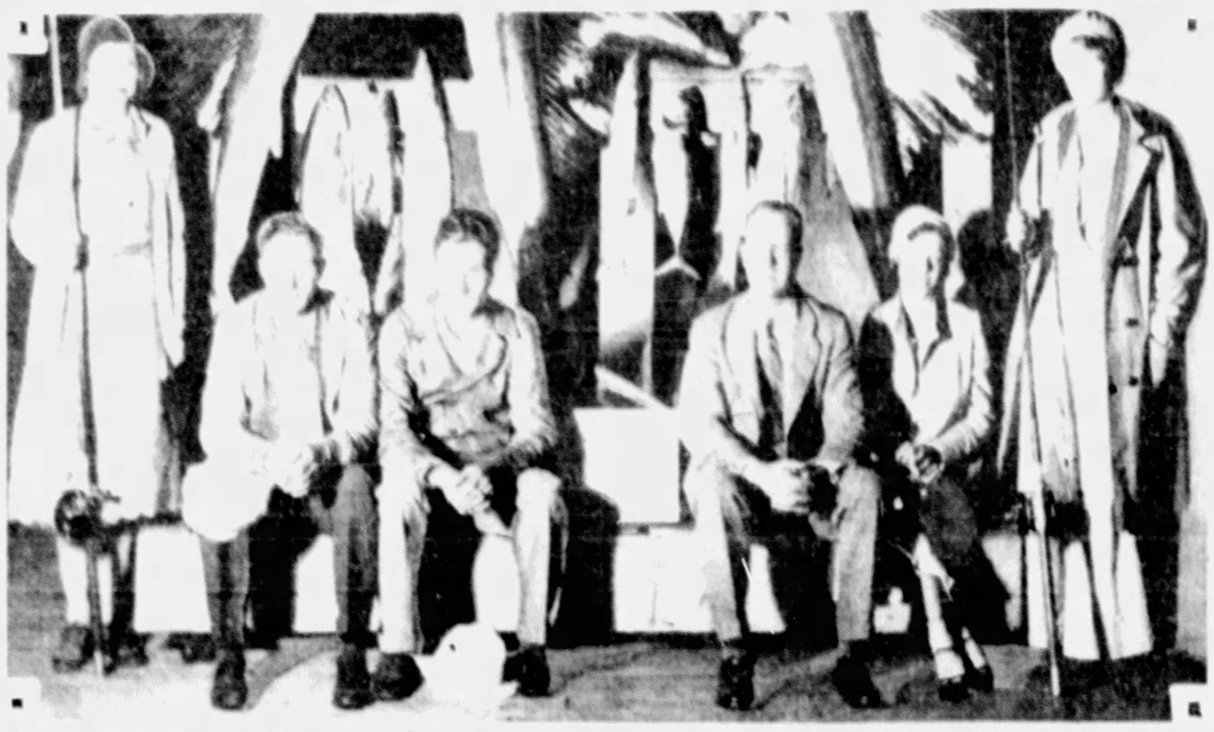
The Waners They a-Fishing Go



Mrs. Paul Waner — Paul — Lloyd — A Friend — Miss Martha Snyder — Mrs. Lloyd Waner

FLORIDA FISHIN' CALLS WANERS

The sea breezes of Miami Beach, Fla. have had a wondrous effect upon little Lloyd Waner, star center fielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates who enjoyed a big season in baseball this year after having had a breakdown in health in 1930. Brother Paul also is reaping the health benefit of the southern resort.

The two Bucco topliners accompanied by their families went to Miami Beach shortly after the conclusion of the world series. Fishing for deep-sea fish has served to amuse them while toning them up for another big season on the diamond.

Paul has just written Owner Barney Dreyfuss of the Pirates to the effect that Lloyd is in better health than he has been in a long time. The brothers with their wives are shown in the above picture received here by the mother of Mrs. Lloyd Waner, Mrs. Lydia Snyder, of Oakland. Mrs. Snyder's younger daughter, Miss Martha, has just returned from Miami Beach, where she has been visiting with the Waners.

K. O. Christner vs. Steve Demeter, 10 rounds; Jackie Bloom vs. Johnny Comiro, 8 rounds (Christmas Fund Show), Toledo.

Danny Devlin vs. Milton Krompier, Jim Furies vs. Lester Robinson and Charlie Badami vs. Johnny Fitzpatrick, 6 rounds each, St. Nicholas Arena, New York.

Jimmy Belmont and Ted Yarosz today enter the final stages of their training for their 10-round windup engagement at Motor Square Garden, Christmas afternoon. Belmont in the Braddock Library gym and Yarosz in his own quarters in Monaca.

With their respective managers embroiled in a bitter controversy emanating from remarks made by Frank Klaus, mentor of Belmont, anent Yarosz' fighting style, the boxers themselves are maintaining a discreet silence and bending all of their energies to their training maneuvers. This is a return battle, Yarosz having won the first one, at Oil City, a little more than a year ago, when neither had attained his present degree of prominence.

Tony Marino, Duquesne bantamweight, boxes Johnny Edwards in a 10-round main bout at Wheeling tonight. Freddie Boylstein, of Kittanning, and Jackie Herman, of Wheeling, are in the semi-final.

Joey Thomas and Danny Belmont, Chicago boxers, who have been here several weeks, are champing at the bit awaiting bouts. They came here with some assurance that they would be given action, but so far the promises have been unfulfilled.

Dempsey, at Home, Helps Destitute

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion of the world, will make a happy Christmas possible for one family of Salt Lake City's poor.

Dempsey, here to spend Christmas with his mother, Mrs. Cecilia Dempsey, turned Santa Claus on his arrival.

"Just sign me up for one of those families of poor for Christmas," he told a representative of a local relief organization, "and make it a big family. After we are grown up, we all learn to take it on the chin sooner or later, but that's no business for youngsters."

All-Americana —A Story

By JESS CARVER

This is the story of a girl, a 110-pound lass not more than 5 feet 2 inches tall, who made an all-America football player out of a guy who was headed straight for the old discard. You may term it a love story if they laughed when I said I could pound out romances, and it may be called a lot of things, but you can kick this around, it's all true.

We'll call the girl Isabel and we'll name the boy Eddie. Eddie was a big husky chap weighing around 220 pounds, better than 6 feet tall and gifted with everything that goes into the making of a real footballer. He was fast, hit hard, had a great drive and a scrapping heart.

But, like a lot of storm kings of the gridiron, our Eddie was too easy-going in other respects. He cracked the old books only when he absolutely had to. His company off the campus wasn't all it might have been. Eddie slowly but surely was riding for a fall, facing dismissal from school and bye-bye to all chances of achieving football fame.

Then along came Isabel. The pair met at a school affair of some sort and Eddie fell. He fell as hard as any 220-pounder ever did for a pair of warm brown eyes and a sweet and understanding smile. This time his fall was for the good.

In less time that it takes to tell it, or to get a padlock snapped on your door by the feds, Isabel was leading big Eddie around by the nose. He was carrying her books to school, the big goof, and she had him on the straight and narrow so hard he didn't know whether he was coping or goint.

Isabel took all the bumps and raps Eddie was taking down there on the field. It was harder on Isabel because the anxiety in her heart for Eddie made every shock doubly tough. Of course the thunderous cheers at Eddie's play brought forth caused her thrill from toe to head. And then, the game over and the roar of the crowd stilled, it was Isabel who drew the pain from Eddie's hurts and bruises as only a sweetheart can.

Then came the grand and glorious climax — the all-America deluge. Eddie made the best of them. He was hailed nationally. Through the newspapers, on the radio and in the magazines, the country became Eddie-conscious. But the country didn't know all. I knew, though, and so did others of Eddie's pa' and every time I saw his face in a newspaper layout—I thought, in the background, Isabel's face should have been there, too, and beside Eddie's name on the scrolls of the famous—there should have been that of Isabel.

A toast, ev hearties—to All-America Isabel!

Louisville Buys Asheville Club

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Officials of the Asheville club of the Piedmont Baseball League announced here today that the club had been sold to the Louisville club of the American Association. The amount involved was not announced.

The Colonels will use the Asheville club as a farm.

Coast Speedboat Racer Sets Record

LONG BEACH, Cal., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Staff Commodore Dick Loynes, of the Long Beach Yacht Club, driver of the Gold Cup challenge speedboat California, broke the six-year-old American statute mile straightaway record of 61.77 miles per hour yesterday when he turned in 62.29 miles per hour in a race against time supervised by the American Power Boat Association.

Local Golf Star Gets Hole in One

J. A. Langfitt, Jr., a visitor at Stanton Heights yesterday, scored a hole in one on the 165-yard eighth hole. The drive landed a few feet from the pin and rolled into the cup.

He was playing in a foursome with Carl Gass, Arthur Hefren and Edward Kliment.

CHICAGO SEEKS TITLE BOUTS

Lewis' most important piece of business was to sign Max Schmeling for a defense of the heavyweight title against Mickey Walker sometime in March. The articles for the heavy title battle included a proviso that Schmeling may withdraw if the Illinois Legislature fails to approve an amendment to the state boxing law providing for 15-round championship bouts. The stadium has offered Herr Maxie $200,000 or a privilege of 40 per cent of the gate to meet Walker.

Also in Lewis' brief case were articles for title bouts between Tony Canzoneri, ruler of the world lightweights, and Christopher (Baby) Battalino, featherweight champion, in February, and Lou Brouillard, welterweight titleholder, and either Jimmy McLarnin or Jackie Fields, the latter a former champion of his division. The welter title bout would be held in February or March.

MARTIN NAMED STAR ATHLETE

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—To John Leonard (Pepper) Martin belongs the distinction of turning in the outstanding individual achievement in sports for 1931, in the overwhelming opinion of American sports writers and editors.

With the same sort of speed that marked his sensational solo flight against the Athletics in the world series, the young St. Louis Cardinal outfielder romped away with the votes in a nationwide poll conducted by the Associated Press.

Martin was singled out as the individual star of the year by 68 experts out of a total of 112. This was slightly more than 50 per cent, giving Pepper a clear majority over all other candidates combined.

Pepper Martin, St. Louis Cardinals, 68.
Francis Ouimet, national amateur golf champion, 11.
Alex Wilson, Yale football captain, 2.
Johnny Baker, Southern California football coach, 1.
Howard H. Jones, Southern California football coach, 1.
John Orr, Colgate football captain, 1.

Bear Gridders Off For Game in Dixie

BERKELEY, Cal., Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Coach Navy Bill Ingram and his University of California football squad today were en route to Atlanta, Ga., to close the season in a game against Georgia Tech Saturday.

All men injured in Pacific Coast games this season had recovered, and Coach Ingram was highly optimistic about the game's outcome.

The Bears will practice at New Orleans en route to Atlanta.

A. L. Hockey Stars Fined for Fight

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Manager Babe Dye of the Chicago Shamrocks of the American Hockey League, and Ralph (Bouncer) Taylor, Shamrock defenseman, must pay husky fines for their part in a free-for-all fight after their game with the Kansas City Plamors Saturday night.

Dye was fined $50 and Taylor $20 after a fist fight which followed the game, in which Referee McKinnon was struck several times.

The J. P. Rooneys, unbeaten champions of the West Penn Independent Football Conference, were held to a scoreless tie by an all-star team of conference players at West View Park yesterday. About 2,000 attended the contest, a benefit game to aid the unemployed. The clubs were hampered by a muddy gridiron. The game's stars were Wagoner, who was forced out by injuries, Kemp, Skender, Karcis, Berkman, Auchter and Blackstone.

The Rox Rangers nosed out Westinghouse Alumni, 7 to 6, in the championship game of the Lightweight Conference, Joe Vitelli scoring a beautiful placekick after plunging over for a touchdown in the final period to bring home the bacon for his team. A crowd estimated at 10,000 attended.

In other football games yesterday, Christy Park and McKeesport Crimsons played to a scoreless tie; McNertney topped Marquette, 7-6; the Papales tripped the Bloomfield Civics, 6-0; Fourth Ward won from Prep Juniors, 6-0, and the Beltzhoover Scholastics won from Suburban, 6-0. The lineups:

MARTIN LEADS A. A. BATTERS

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The official averages of the American Association affirm that none other than Charles Arthur (The Great) Shires, of the Milwaukee Brewers, is the individual batting champion for 1931.

Shires, playing in 157 games, compiled an average of .385 to fulfill his promise to lead the batsmen. He hit safely 240 times, good for 334 bases, and had 45 doubles, eight triples and 11 home runs.

Tied for second place were Bevo Le Bourveau, the 1930 champion, who played last season for Toledo and Columbus, and Tommy Angley, Indianapolis catcher, with averages of .375.

Pat Crawford, Columbus first baseman, led in home runs with 28, two more than George Davis, of St. Paul, had.

Grid Rules Body To Discuss Scoring

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—For the third successive year the football rules committee will consider the point system of scoring to decide winners in tied games at its annual meeting here December 30.

The system, which was used in the round robin tournament in the Yale Bowl, December 5, was originated by Robert B. Morris, of Newark, N. J.

The rules board refused to adopt the system at two previous meetings, because it was claimed that football was not ready for this change.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

STOCK MARKET RISES AFTER DECLINE

Losses Widely Replaced By Small Gains; Steel Recovers; Hershey Up 4

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Securities markets began the holiday week with signs of restored confidence today, as result of the strong boost received late last week.

Stocks had a mild sinking spell for a time in the morning, but further indications of organized support in the bond market soon had a stimulating effect, and losses were widely replaced by small gains. Trading was fairly quiet.

Early losses of 2 points in New York Central and Santa Fe were regained, and the latter recorded an advance of more than 2. Hershey Chocolate sold up 4 points on a report that the annual dividend would be increased from $5 to $6. Miscellaneous issues up a point or so included Southern Pacific, Bethlehem Steel, Chesapeake and Ohio, International Harvester, Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey, General Electric, Du Pont, Corn Products and others. Early losses of a point or so in United States Steel and American Telephone were recovered. In the oils, Stand of New Jersey and Texas Corporation were rather heavy.

Brokers reported that the buying in both stocks and bonds was of a distinctly encouraging character, with some interests coming into the market for the first time in months. It was pointed out, however, that pending developments in Washington and abroad, there was a distinct tendency to proceed slowly.

The copper trade was encouraged by reports from abroad of a full agreement between the various world producers on curtailment of production, but the red metal price held unchanged at 7¼ cents.

A period of heaviness in the oil shares occurred, despite the fact that the stoppage of production in East Texas one day a week was inaugurated yesterday.

The money market was a little firmer, with call loans renewing at 3 per cent for the first time since last January.

Brokerage quarters expected the week to be rather quiet, in view of the interruption of the Christmas holiday Friday. It is possible that the stock exchange may remain closed on Saturday, although the board of governors is not expected to act on that matter until Wednesday.

WHEAT PRICES SHOW GAINS

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—Wheat prices tended upward early today, helped by unexpected firmness of quotations at Liverpool. The Liverpool market reported a noticeable lack of selling pressure, and a decrease in Liverpool supplies, together with smallness of world shipments. Opening at a shade off to ½ up, Chicago wheat futures sagged somewhat, and then advanced all around. Corn started unchanged to ¼ lower and subsequently rallied.

Proposals to donate to charity 40,000,000 bushels of Farm Board wheat were construed in some quarters as a bullish factor. Another strengthening influence was word that the Argentine harvest was now approaching the frost zone, where yields were likely to prove less favorable. In addition, the amount of wheat on ocean passage, although larger than a week ago, was nearly 3,000,000 bushels under the total at this time last year.

Predicts Increase In Power Building

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—V. D. Simons, Chicago industrial engineer, sees a quick pickup in power building. He said today that American public utility companies would soon begin preparing to meet an enlarged demand for their services as normal conditions return, because since business recession began they have added new business which operating at a normal rate would more than offset that which was lost owing to lowered industrial activity and cessation of new construction.

Senate Bill Seeks Canada Member On Reserve

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Senator Kean (Rep.) of New Jersey, has introduced a resolution to authorize the election of a Canadian member of the Federal Reserve Board and for negotiation of a treaty with Canada for joint action to stabilize the two nations' currencies.

COTTON PRICES EASE OFF

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Cotton opened steady today, unchanged to 5 points off under southern and local selling promoted by easier Liverpool cables. January sold at 6.25.

There was not a great deal of selling by the South, but there seemed to be considerable liquidation or realizing from commission houses while brokers with Liverpool connections had some selling orders after the opening and there was selling by New Orleans. January eased off to 6.19 and May to 6.55 with the active months showing net declines of about 5 to 7 points at the end of the first half hour. The report of the Census Bureau showing 15,358,405 bales ginned prior to December 13 was about in line with expectations, or at least had not appreciable effect on the early market.

The early offerings were absorbed by scale down buying for trade or short accounts and the market was quiet with prices holding fairly steady later in the morning. At midday January was holding around 6.19 with the general market showing net losses of 6 to 7 points.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 21.—Spot cotton quiet; prices 5 points lower; quotations in pence. American strict good middling, 5.77; good middling, 5.37; strict middling, 5.27; middling, 5.22; strict low middling, 5.17; low middling, 5.07; strict good ordinary, 4.87; good ordinary, 4.57. Receipts, 26,000 bales; American, 22,100. Futures closed steady. December, 4.92; January, 4.90; March, 4.89; May, 4.89; July, 4.93; October, 4.99; December, 5.04.

First 3% Renewal Rate Since January

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The stock exchange renewal rate on call money today was 3 per cent. This is the first 3 per cent renewal rate since early in January. Renewals have recently been at 2½ per cent. The advance today was in line with the marking up of the call rate to 3 per cent on Friday in response to year-end influences in the money market, after 2½ per cent renewals.

Atchison Loadings Lower for Week

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—During the week ended December 19, the Atchison Railway handled 24,211 revenue cars, compared with 25,730 in the week preceding and 30,860 in the like 1930 week.

Columbia Gas-Standard Oil Form Close Tie-up

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE FORMATION OF CLOSER relations between Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation and the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey is indicated by the election of Christy Payne to membership on the board of directors of the former organization. Mr. Payne is a director of Standard Oil of New Jersey in charge of natural gas operations.

The naming of Floyd L. Carlisle to the Columbia board also is significant, since it adds to the tie-up with leading eastern utilities whose operations may be closely allied in the future. Mr. Carlisle is chairman of board of Niagara Hudson Power, which controls extensive utility operations in Buffalo and other parts of up-state New York. In addition he is a director of Consolidated Gas Company of New York. The possibility of extending natural gas service to New York City still is remote, but it has been under discussion from time to time.

Another of Mr. Carlisle's connections also is important to Columbia. He is a director of the United Corporation, which owns about 25 per cent of Columbia's stock. This, however, merely strengthens an existing relationship, since three other Columbia directors are also on the United board. United Corporation is directly controlled by the Morgan, Drexel, Bonbright group, of which J. P. Morgan & Co. is, of course, the dominant figure.

With Columbia's recently completed gas lines into Eastern Pennsylvania, the connection with United Corporation becomes even more important, since this organization is a major stockholder in United Gas Improvement in Philadelphia. United Gas Improvement and United Corporation between them have actual voting control of Public Service Corporation of New Jersey.

Relation to Standard Oil

THESE EASTERN AFFILIATIONS of Columbia Gas are important, since they may outline the course of the company's future expansion after the organization's business in new territories is consolidated and the company becomes ready to further extend its natural gas system which, even at the present time, is the largest in the world.

The presence of a Standard Oil of New Jersey man on Columbia's board is of even more immediate news interest, since it is accompanied by several close working relationships and the acquisition of interests in some of the Columbia operating properties by Standard. The latter has become a 30 per cent owner of the Atlantic Seaboard Corporation, which controls the line built by Columbia from the Kentucky and West Virginia gas fields to Washington, D. C., with an extension to other Columbia lines near Philadelphia. Columbia and Standard of New Jersey also are jointly interested in lines being built from the new Tioga gas field to various points in New York state.

Standard and Columbia have had other but less important working relationships for several years. Columbia has used a large share of the former's natural gas production in West Virginia.

Strong Affiliations

WHILE DIFFICULTIES IN arranging new financing to retire bank loans made to finance recent improvements have compelled Columbia Gas to substitute dividends payable in new convertible 5 per cent preference stock in place of cash dividends, the strong affiliations of Columbia with other powerful interests insure the fact that it will have ample resources to carry it through the business depression. In addition they indicate that Columbia will have a vast future growth after the work of fully developing new territories has begun to show results.

In Memoriam 1-B

In loving memory of my dear son, Kenneth W. Kelley, who passed away one year ago today.
There is someone who misses you sadly,
And finds the time long since you went.
There is someone who thinks of you always,
And tries to be brave and content.
Mother and Sister.

Bill Objects to Nevis Doing Work After They Hire New Servants

CHAPTER IV.

Bill answered Nevis stiffly, his face darkening: "I wasn't aware that I'd made a fool of myself. We had a good time, that's all. It never hurts to ingratiate yourself with the wife of a man with whom you may be able to do business. By the way, you might have been a little more decent to Bartlett, yourself. You acted as if he had leprosy or something. I had to explain you had a headache—"

"You needn't bother explaining me," she said furiously, the old jackass was drunk—"

"He could hardly be a jackass and acquire eight million dollars or more in a few short years," Bill instructed her with dangerous gentleness, "and as to being drunk—what's got into you, Nevis? You've seen men drunk before—lots of them—and Bartlett was just slightly fried—that's all. I thought he was a riot."

"Did you? Well, I didn't. I didn't find it comic to have him paw at me—oh, good," she said, "all glittery eyes and drool—'What a delightful boy you make, Mrs. Lancaster,'" she mocked, "so delightful that I'm relieved to realize that you are, after all, a woman, or rather, a girl—a very charming girl. No. He didn't paw at you and make indecent wisecracks. He left that to his wife, I suppose, in your case."

"Hey, pipe down," said Bill, in character and costume, "that will be about all from you." He laughed, suddenly, his ill humor evaporating. "I'd have given 50 bucks to have heard him. He has, you know, quite a reputation as a ladies' man."

"And you want me to be nice to—that slug," she demanded.

"Why not? You can take care of yourself, besides he doesn't mean any harm, and it would help me a lot. I wish you'd be nicer to a lot of men I meet in a semi-social way, Nevis. You used to be the life of the party but darned if you aren't turning out a wet blanket."

"We're spending too much money," she said, abruptly.

"We have to spend in order to get," he reminded her. "I make it as fast as it goes out, don't I?"

"You do. But we haven't a cent put away, and we're in debt."

DIDN'T ENJOY PARTY

He rose, set down his glass and came over to her, his engaging smile turned full upon her. "Come on, don't be an Airedale," he coaxed gently. He slipped an arm about her slim waist. "Let's go to bed. In the morning you'll feel better. That punch tonight was pretty depressing, I guess, and you never could stand much."

"If you are implying that I'm tight," she began, weakly, trying to steel herself against his charm.

"Well, no, a little tighter and you'd feel great," he chuckled. "Come on, there's a honey. You're peeved about something. Anna and Paul? Fire 'em and get some new ones even if you have to pay a premium. I'm sorry Bartlett annoyed you, Nevis. I don't honestly think he means any harm. And I had just as poor a time, honest, listening to his frau coo about moonlight on the Ganges or wherever it was she saw moonlight last. Here, hop aboard. Anchors aweigh."

Nevis permitted herself to be carried upstairs. Bill picked her up without further announcement. At the landing, he looked down at her small, dark, weary face against his shoulder. "Pretty strong guy you married," he said gayly, "better be good—or I'll turn you over P" knee and spank you."

"Try it," said Nevis, and smiled back into the blue eyes regarding her own with merriment.

GET JAPANESE SERVANTS

She thought: "It's no good. I'm too crazy about him. I do trust him, too. But I can't help thinking we are riding for a fall."

Bill had his yachting trip, the following month. He came back bronzed and beaming and so successful that Mr. Burton called him into the office and had a gratifying little chat with him. He made some money on the market, too. He said, as week after week Nevis struggled up to agencies and back again and the household was a never-ending succession of haphazard domestic discomforts: "Pay more. We can stand the gaff. What's the use of getting yourself all hot and bothered over this sort of inferior cattle?"

So they paid more and acquired expensive but hideously efficient Japanese. Two of them. One who cooked and served and one who cleaned and did odd jobs. Bill called the latter the "upstairs girl." He couldn't tell them apart so he named one Hari and the other Kari, and enjoyed his silly pun immensely and repeated it to all comers.

He golfed a good deal. Nevis had more time on her hands than she knew what to do with. She couldn't, she told herself, play bridge every day. She could, and did, golf and swim and play tennis. But there was leisure time, nevertheless. Of course, she could always drop in at Olive's or Frances' or Della's or anyone else's for tea and talk, which always turned out to be cocktails and cigarets and gossip. But she didn't want to, day in and day out. It bored her. She thought her figure suffered and she knew her skin did. She had to go in for costly creams and oils and massages and treatments. She'd never had to before and was, she assured herself solemnly, much too young to begin it. She tried staying at home and making new lampshades and embroidering fire screens. Now and then someone would come in and catch her at it and she would find herself as apologetic as if she had been discovered "in flagrante delicta."

"Heavens," said Olive languidly to Bill as he drove her down to Westlynne one late afternoon, "what's wrong with Nevis? She's gone domestic or something. I dropped in there the other afternoon and found her sewing. It isn't, I trust, a little stranger in the offing? Or if it is, she's gone mad to want to dress it in peach chiffon."

Olive drove down with Bill rather often. She had a way of going to town, by train, or with her father, leaving her own cars and chauffeur idle in the garage, and of 'phoning him casually: "Bill, I'm up here alone. No, I didn't drive up. But I can't endure the thought of going back by train. Can I meet you somewhere?"

When Hari took a day off Nevis amused herself with getting up what she called a scratch supper, if they weren't going anywhere. She had a grand time with new salads and trick aspics and mechanical refrigerator desserts. She messed about the kitchen to Kari's marked disapproval, and loved it. And met Bill at the door, a little untidy as to frock and hair, a little shiny as to nose, and greeted him gayly:

"A feast for Belshazzer awaits you, milord."

But he didn't like it.

He grumbled at her more than once.

"I wish you wouldn't. It looks as if we were up against it or something. We can go out to the club for dinner when the Jap is out. I don't want you slaving over a stove. It's silly, Nevis, you tire yourself out to no purpose."

She told him that she liked to. He said that wasn't the point. She retorted that she had nothing to do while he was away. And he countered with the remark that other women found plenty to do, he thought. Why couldn't she?

He was better pleased when he came home and she wasn't there, when he had to go sleuthing for her, cheerfully making the rounds and winding up at some neighborly house or other to be greeted with feminine exclamations from the bridge tables on the porch; to run up the steps grinning: "My wife is missing. Have you seen her? Small, dark girl, with a wicked ankle and a fairly good disposition. Oh, there you are, infant! Thought you'd eloped. Thanks," to his hostess, "I don't mind if I do—make it long and cold and put lots of fizz in it, will you? Hello, girls, what's the dirt?"

Yes, he liked that best; to find her in a group of pretty, well-dressed idle women—as pretty, as well-dressed, as idle as any of them.

Then, too, going home was just going home, while going somewhere else was an adventure. And his appearance was the signal for fluttered dovecotes. Women who have been alone all day, doing nothing and very little of that, looking at one another for entertainment and trying to get a word in edgewise are always on welcome committees when it comes to a personable man.

That was the life, thought Bill: a hard day's work at the office—a couple of hours off for lunch—a drive home through the traffic to your own bit of land and at the end of your trip a flock of pretty women to make a fuss over you and all the time your secret knowledge that none of them could hold a candle to your own girl.

Half a dozen times a month he said to Sam Burton: "Boy, if it hadn't been for you, I'd probably be making lead pipe and liking it. What a thought!"

"Ain't it the truth?" grinned Sam as proud of Bill and his prowess as if he had created him.

There was, however, nothing very startling about Bill Lancaster's success. He had definite charm and personality, and a belief in his star which lent him a glorious, but never arrogant, self-confidence. He was seemingly without worries. He behaved as if he hadn't a care in the world. As if he had been born rich and successful. And as most people take a man at his own valuation it had worked. The business with which he was connected must be good, they argued, if it could provide him with so excellent a living. He dressed very well, he belonged to good clubs, he was a generous and free, if never ostentatious, spender. Ergo, he must have Big Backing. He entertained delightfully, his wife was pretty and attractive and her clothes stacked up with the clothes of other women whose husbands were known to be more than successful. Besides, Bill had connections. He was still something of a legend among classmates and undergraduates and alumni. They hadn't forgotten Big Bill Lancaster. And he brought to his salesmanship much of his football methods, dogged determination, belief in ultimate victory, and now and then a spectacular play which arrested the attention of the man he was trying to land. All this shot through with his engaging grin, his deference to older men which never made them feel old, yet upheld their dignity, his willingness to listen and to be contradicted, his patience at explaining and, when he lost, his entire good humor.

And so, when Nevis said, wearily: "Why do we have to throw a party for the Marvins? You know perfectly well, Bill Lancaster, that man is so rotten I'd hate to have him sit at my table and use the same glasses and silver we use. And as for his wife!" He answered: "Don't be small town, Nevis. This is business. Forget your scruples. Can't you help me a little bit? Don't you want to?"

Well, of course, put like that. But it rankled. She said to Della, once: "Bill says I'm small town," and Della responded amiably: "Well, aren't we all?"

Della was to become a mother soon. She was very happy.

Mort was beaming and complacent. Della said, a little defiantly, for it appeared that one had to explain oneself in such circumstances to one's friend: "Well, why shouldn't we have a baby? We planned this one. A boy with my eyes and Mort's nose—he has a nice nose—and no hair at all, for awhile. I'm young and healthy and so is Mort and we have plenty of money."

Nevis, listening, went home and reported to Bill, more wistfully than she knew, "Della's awfully happy about the baby, Bill."

"Sure. She lets everyone know it. Maybe it's defense mechanism," explained Bill carelessly.

"Bill Lancaster, you never thought that all up by yourself! You don't know a defense mechanism from a—a conditional benavior. Olive's been talking to you again."

"She does eat that stuff up," he admitted, "and half the time I don't know what she's raving about. I do understand this a little though I mean, in plain English, maybe Della's sore or something and is trying to bluff."

"I don't think so." Nevis told him, sobering. "She and Mort are as tickled as a couple of kids with a new toy."

"Better them than us," said Bill lightly. And stopped at the look on Nevis' face. He said:

"You wouldn't, Nevis? But it would gum things up for us, darling. We have to be free a while longer, till we get a good solid stake behind us. Besides I couldn't spare you. I want you with me." His arms went around her, "And I'd be so darned scared!" he said, low.

In a way, that was the sweetest thing he had ever said to her. She loved him for it.

"I don't want you slaving over a stove," Bill told Nevis.

Synopsis

It was taken for granted that Bill Lancaster would enter his father's lead pipe manufacturing business after he graduated from college. However, following his marriage to Nevis Hammond, he leaves the little Pennsylvania town where he was raised and goes to New York to sell bonds. The young couple give a house-warming. Among the guests are Sam Burton, Bill's college chum; Sam's sister, Fluff Waterford; Butch Dorgan, a classmate and his stage-struck fiancee Marise Norton. Later, they make a round of the night clubs and Nevis and Bill return to their topsy-turvy home at 5 a. m. For business reasons, Bill entertains lavishly. Nevis is forced to get a maid in order to keep up with his pace. Bill meets the much discussed Olive Blanchard. Sam warns him against her. While Nevis is away, Olive takes Bill to see a house which she says would be ideal for him and Nevis. Nevis resents Olive's interference, but she loves the house and she and Bill take it.

Release

There is no time for strife
And bitterness
In this swift-moving life,
So I confess
My every fault in haste,
Then turn aside
Lest vain regret should waste
One joy, denied.

There is no cause to hold
Old hates in thought,
When from love's shining gold
Such coins are wrought
As purchase all men need
Of truth and peace.
Through love has God decreed
From hate, release.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-
WARNER THEATERS
JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

There is great excitement in the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club this week. One of the reasons for the unusual interest is that Santa Claus has promised to visit all the Warner theaters on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday promptly at 4 o'clock. He will bring a gift for every child in the audience.

Another joyous announcement is that a big free show will be given for all children at all the Warner Theaters on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. It will be a full length program and will be free to all children.

CHRISTMAS IN ITALY

Christmas in Italy begins with Christmas Eve. During the 24 hours before Christmas there is fasting, because the season is a religious one. At twilight candles are lighted around a miniature representation of the birthplace of Christ, and the children recite poems before it. Then follows the dinner, which always includes fish.

Later comes the drawing of presents from the Urn of Fate. All the gifts are placed in the urn just as ours are placed under a Christmas tree.

At midnight on Christmas Eve the bells are rung and in the principal churches mass is said.

The people of Italy do not use evergreens to decorate their churches or homes, but use flowers instead. People often carry torches on the street and in some cities there are fireworks. At 3 o'clock on Christmas morning the Shepherd's hymn is sung.

At New Year's time, the Italians do some of the things we do on Christmas. On Epiphany Eve is celebrated the festival of Befano. She is their Santa Claus and rides on a broomstick and carries gifts to children. She is supposed to come down a chimney ringing a bell, and put gifts into good children's stockings.

Christmas is Christmas wherever we may travel—a day of good will and rejoicing.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

GOSH DAD, DID YOU NOTICE HOW POSITIVELY SURPRISED MR. EL DORADO GOT WHEN YOU TALKED ABOUT THAT MINING CONCERN? USUALLY HE'S SO CALM THAT IT SORT OF GETS ON ONES NERVES.
YOU MEAN WHEN I TALKED ABOUT RAISING THE MINERS PAY? HE'S PROBABLY ONE OF THOSE EMPLOYERS WHO THINKS THE ONLY TIME HIRED-MEN SHOULD FIGURE ON GETTING A BREAK IS WHEN THEY FALL OUT OF THE HAY LOFT. A SMART BOSS KNOWS THAT EVERY TIME HE MAKES A PASS AT A WORKER HE HITS A STOCKHOLDER.
I'VE ALWAYS KNOWN HE WAS INCLINED TO BE-WELL, SOMEWHAT CALLOUS WITH HELP.
I'VE BEEN IN A LOT OF BUSINESSES. IN SOME OF THEM I WAS JUST A FLAGMAN AND IN OTHERS THE ENGINEER, AND I'VE ALWAYS NOTICED THAT A BIG MAN SAYS GOOD MORNING TO THE MEN IN THE SAME VOICE THAT HE'D SAY GOOD MORNING BOSS.
I'VE NEVER ADMIRED THAT SPIRIT IN MR. EL DORADO. HE KNOWS IT TOO.
PEOPLE WHO INHERIT MONEY FALL HEIR TO A LOT OF DIZZY IDEAS TOO. THERE'S TWO KINDS OF BOSSES, ONE GRABS THE FRONT END OF A PIANO HIS MEN ARE CARRYING DOWNSTAIRS, AND THE OTHER SORT, LIKE EL DORADO, WANTS TO RIDE ON TOP AND RAZZ EVERYBODY ABOUT BEING AFRAID OF WORK. YES SIR, I KNOW THOSE BABIES!

Points of the President's Message

Number 10.

Congress should give serious consideration as soon as possible to the measures urged by President Hoover for the relief of depositors in closed banks.

In his annual message Mr. Hoover recommends the development of a plan through the Federal Reserve Banks by which as large a portion of their deposits in closed banks can be made quickly available to depositors as the assets of these institutions warrant.

Through the Federal Reserve System the government can quickly find out how much of these "frozen" funds it is warranted in making available to the depositors and the depositors should get the benefit of that information at once.

They should not be compelled to wait for their money for months, and sometimes for years, until the affairs of the banks have been straightened out.

"Such provision," Mr. Hoover says, "would go far to relieve distress in a multitude of families, would stabilize values in many communities and would liberate working capital to thousands of concerns."

Some 6,000,000 citizens, North, East, South and West, it is estimated, have money tied up indefinitely in closed banks. These deposits total approximately $2,500,000,000.

The assets of these closed banks will probably warrant the ultimate payment of at least 40 per cent of these deposits.

If Congress will enact legislation requiring the Federal Reserve banks to liquify a safe portion of each bank that goes into receivership, approximately $1,000,000,000 will be put into circulation promptly.

Here is an emergency proposal for legislation that will relieve millions of our fellow citizens, help to restore confidence, aid in the revival of business and benefit communities all over the country which have suffered from bank failures.

It will be an indefensible neglect of the public interest if Congress does not legislate early in the present session for the relief of depositors whose funds are now tied up in closed banks.

The Legislature's Duty

Let the Members, as Senator Harris Suggests, Reconvene and Do Something for the Unemployed.

Senator Frank Harris voices the feeling of many thoughtful people in condemning the Legislature for its failure to do anything worth while for the relief of the destitute unemployed.

The special session has been worse than a disappointment—it has been a waste of $400,000 of the taxpayers' money, for that is what it cost the commonwealth, and nothing really noteworthy was accomplished.

The Talbot bill, appropriating $10,000,000 for poor relief, is declared by the Attorney General to be unconstitutional.

Senator Harris, dissatisfied, suggests that Gov. Pinchot call a conference of legislative, political, business, labor and social welfare leaders at which a new relief program shall be prepared, and that the Legislature again convene, without pay, and put it into effect.

In this sensible proposal the Legislature has an opportunity to redeem itself. It is doubtful if a better plan can be offered.

A Unified School Plan

The Proposed Metropolitan System for Allegheny County Would Be Helpful.

In his address to the school directors of Allegheny County Dr. J. Linwood Eisenberg, president of Slippery Rock State Teachers' College, pointed out advantages that would result from putting all the public schools in the county under a metropolitan system, with centralized direction.

The most important benefit would be that one school would be as good as another, and in consequence children would not be handicapped in their educational opportunities because, let us say, they lived in a backward township instead of in the city.

Under the plan proposed by Dr. Eisenberg not municipal boundaries but the convenience of the pupils would determine the location of schools. That would be an improvement.

The present educational system in the county, with its inequalities and wastefulness, furnishes a good argument for the conversion of the whole county into a metropolitan district to be known as the City of Pittsburgh.

He Just Can't Be Good

Robert Considine's Case Offers Support for One Theory of Criminology.

There is a school of penology which maintains that criminals are of two kinds—those who ought never to be sentenced to prison, and those who ought never to be released from prison.

The case of Robert Considine, who has pleaded guilty to 68 burglaries and numerous other offenses in the Pittsburgh district, offers support for the latter part of the theory.

Considine is a good illustration of what the criminologists call a "recidivist," a confirmed criminal who, perhaps because of some mental quirk or disease, just can't live an honest life.

He told Judge James H. Gray he had served prison terms off and on, in various parts of the world, since he was 18. Once he was sentenced for life in London, but was pardoned at the request of Lady Astor. In recent years he had made something of a reputation as a writer of detective stories.

Yet in spite of all his punishment, in spite of the efforts to help him, he returned to burglary.

Fake Charities

Robbing the poor box is rightly held up to be one of the most contemptible of crimes.

Pittsburgh's poor box has been pillaged of millions of dollars in recent years, according to G. H. Dennison, manager of the Better Business Bureau.

There is one way in which the swindlers can be defeated, and that is by ignoring appeals from solicitors and organizations with whom you are not acquainted and giving to the poor through the Welfare Fund.

Good Hunting!

By Nelson Harding

It is the hunter's season now,
And hunting he will go;
The hound is following the tracks
Seen plainly in the snow.

The game, of course, is lying low,
But when that hollow tree
Is emptied of what hides within
We'll see what we shall see.

Husky Father—Husky Son

What Will History Say About These Two Mussolini Boys?

VITTORIA AND BRUNO MUSSOLINI, SONS OF THE DUCE

If you are interested in heredity, more important to human beings than any other study, you will examine, with interest, the faces of these two boys, son of the powerful Italian, Mussolini.

You will notice that in their boyish way they are trying to look as "Mussolini-like" as possible, severe, menacing.

However, you can't always tell what is back of the forehead by the look on the face. The milder, bigger Mussolini boy may do the real work when the time comes. And both may be as important to a new Rome as Romulus and Remus to old Rome, without the tragedy, let us hope.

What fortune teller, astrologer, crystal-gazer or other penetrator of the future can tell what history will say of these two youngsters?

Will one of them, by any possibility, take his father's place as the driving power of Italy? Probably not.

"Like father, like son," is a proverb, but 999 times out of 1,000 it is an inaccurate proverb. Like father, UNLIKE son, would be nearer to it.

Because the son does not inherit the power of the father, except in rare cases, the laws of inherited property and inherited title and authority were invented, that the father might hand his position and his possessions down to his own flesh and blood.

Mussolini, if he chose, could have put the crown of Italy on his own head, undoubtedly. And if he chose he might depose the royal family of Italy, and, for a while at least, make one of his boys the Italian ruler, as Cromwell's son became ruler of England, thanks to the fear inspired by the real Cromwell's name.

But Mussolini, wise and patriotic, appreciating the service that the royal family has rendered to Italy, its obedience to law and eagerness for the welfare of Italy, has acted like a true patriot.

He has worked for his country, for the greatness and welfare of the Italian people, not for himself.

And unless his character should change he will say to these boys, "Make your OWN place in the world, and in its sunshine, as I have made mine. And above all BE GOOD SONS OF ITALY."

Marry-Go-Round

Man's Yuletide Blues

For 364 days of the year, every man secretly believes that he is "a boy, at heart."

But, on Christmas Day, he doffs his juvenile role, and leaves most of the youthful exuberance to the women and children.

He may help trim the Christmas tree, automatically hang the holly, and show Junior how to wind up his toys. But, no man ever clapped his hands and danced around ecstatically at the sight of his Christmas presents.

It is the women who keep up the childish Christmas spirit—the secrets, the thrills, the surprises, the enthusiasm! It is the women who do all the plotting, the planning, the shopping, the cheering and the rejoicing.

The whole Christmas idea bores and embarrasses a man—and always has. He hates shopping for Christmas gifts, he dreads the act of presenting them, and worst of all he hates receiving them. It is just impossible for him to work himself up into a lather of excitement over the watermelon necktie from little Willie, the misfit socks from Grandma and the backgammon-board from his loving wife! It all seems such nonsense to him!

It takes constant hints and reminders on the part of his wife, to keep up the game at one end of the wire and a lot of mental effort and patience on the part of his stenographer to see him through the ordeal at the other end.

Whatever he gives his wife for Christmas is the result of deep thought and inspiration on the part of the office stenographer. And whatever he gives his stenographer (outside of an extra check) is the result of a lot of worry. His wife's worry.

* * *

Not that a man doesn't like to play Santa Claus and bestow gifts and surprises. He DOES. But when it's EXPECTED of him! And that's the whole secret of his Yuletide Blues. He's "expected" to be merry—and he WON'T!

* * *

Christmas is just "one of those things" to him—like his wedding anniversary, his wife's birthday and the Thanksgiving dinner at Aunt Mary's. Something to be "got through with."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Diary of a modern Pepys: A dark drizzle of a day and across Forty-second, meeting Gil Boag and Val O'Farrell, the detective with the fiction name. Home and a yearly pass from Al Smith to his Empire aerie and talking to Dave Picton, Texas barrister, as learned a fellow as I know.

Came a phone from Paul Whiteman in Chicago to relay an amusing tale and later with my pretty wench to the Edward Woodward's tea and Mrs. Duncan Fraser, Paulette Madoc, a Countess Paboncheli from Italy and Hans von Hahn there and Eddie Duchin improvised, as always, engagingly on the piano.

After evensong to see Helen Hayes. And Gilbert Miller, the producer, in an unexpected role acquitted himself neatly. And later picking up Helen Menken and Harry Silvey and off cafe-ing, winding up at the Casino. So talking to Morton Downey and to my couch.

They were discussing a lady who had partaken of an indisposed oyster and as a result lost six pounds. "Six pounds," sneered Irvin Cobb. "I could lose that much off each wrist."

* * *

Then there is Gene Crawley's story of the Scotsman who decided he should remember the footweary postman with the permanent wave in his left shoulder who trudged through his postal zone. After much thought, he sent the card of a neighboring chiropodist.

Personal nomination for the actress who doubles most efficiently of all on screen and stage—Helen Hayes.

An irritated producer with three flops in a row, in a personal note says: "Critics no longer review plays for the public. They write for each other. Efforts are solely to appear bright in the eyes of coworkers."

* * *

With no desire to be disputatious, my opinion is, after looking upon critics at a thousand and one opening nights, their attitude toward one another has a shade of the inevitable contempt of familiarity. I doubt if any one cares a whoop what one of his fellows thinks about his critiques.

* * *

When Broadway went chop suey awhile back it shunted many stand-by cafes to side streets. They offered shadowy booths, with excellent dance music, a lower tariff and no cover charge. And flourished. But today drug store counters, serving the Chinese dishes, have changed the picture and many caravansaries of the Ling Hoys and Wah Sees have dipped into a tailspin.

In a musical revue I note a chorus bearing such first names as Jacqueline, Yvette, Lolotte, Nini and Clairette. But it is heartening to find among them a Maggie Shultz. Such frankness has the rainbow tint of promise. Some day we may have a Muggs Malone in the chorus.

Among scattered notes atop the desk is a notation "Clemenceau—Coogan." That concerns Floyd Gibbons' story of a visit of Jackie Coogan to Paris and the expression of a desire to meet Clemenceau. The Tiger declined with this diplomatic beau geste: "I do not really feel important enough."

Most stage bands these days think it necessary to feature a snake-hip or some other variety of eccentric dancer. After one did some ankle twisting acrobatics the other day, Martha Wilchinski sighed: "If Sousa went into vaudeville he'd have to do a buck."

* * *

* * *

Postcard: "I hope you caught that headline in a morning paper: 'Marvelous Exhibition of Old Maps on Madison Avenue!'"

Not I, sweetheart. I live in the next street, anyway.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

For the past month Mom and Dad Ellis have been making excuses to Daughter Rosie because they can't buy her that new fur jacket. Every excuse, mind you, but the honest one . . . which is that they're busted flat and can't afford it.

Tell Daughter Rosie bad news like that? Never!

"We don't believe in darkening young lives with worry," say Mom and Dad Ellis. Youth should be carefree. Youth should have its fun. Time enough to learn about trouble in the long years ahead."

And so Daughter Rosie and Brother Bill are going through college as merrily as though Depression were just a funny word. Just as many pretty dresses and trick sweaters. Just as many parties and excursions. While at home Mom and Dad are living through a real reign of terror. Two mortgages on the house. A couple of notes that will be due in January. That old loan from Jim. And the boss hinting that Dad must prepare to take another cut—perhaps step out entirely.

"How on earth can we keep it from the children?" say Dad and Mom Ellis to each other. "They simply mustn't know. Why, it would break their hearts to leave college."

Know a case like that? Sure you do—dozens of 'em probably. For that's our American way of doing things. Spare the children! Let Mom and Dad sacrifice and struggle and stint, but don't worry the children or deny them anything that's humanly attainable.

Everywhere you see parents doing that—and everywhere you see young people accepting that struggle and sacrifice as a matter of course.

Gallant? Generous? Yes, it's all of that. But I wonder if it's really KIND . . . KIND TO THE CHILDREN THEMSELVES.

Is it cruel to let young people of college age learn about trouble . . . is it selfish to expect them to share bad breaks? Will such knowledge darken their spirits and cheat them of something fine?

Which is the kinder—to treat a boy or a girl of 18 like an idiot or a parasite or like an equal and a comrade?

And who has the greater chance of happiness . . . the youngster who learns what life is all about before he tackles reality or the youngster who has been coddled and protected until the most trifling hardship seems a real tragedy?

Some of them answering it right—

Some of them answering it wrong—

But are YOU answering it?

Wise Words

Our words have wings, but fly not where they would.
—George Eliot.

Hold him alone truly fortunate who has ended his life in happy well-being.
—Aeschylus.

Dreams, books, are each a world;
and books, we know,
Are a substantial world, both pure and good.
—Wordsworth.

Who to no one man
Shows partiality,
Brings round to all men
Some undimmed hours.
—Arnold.

Love either finds equality or makes it;
Like death, he knows no difference in degrees,
But planes and levels all.—Dryden.

Text for Today

Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these brethren, ye did it unto me.—Matthew, xxv:40.

(The text for today is suggested by the Rev. D. C. Buraltz, pastor, First English Lutheran Church, Sharpsburg.)

WHAT DO YOU KNOW?

By S. H. Connolly

Do you know:

1. What English statesman was called the "Great Commoner?"
2. Why was Stephen Douglas called the "Little Giant?"
3. At what king's death did the Reign of Terror in France begin?
4. When was the title of Prince of Wales first given?
5. What king of Spain fitted out the Invincible Armanda?
6. Where was the Magna Charta signed?
7. What is food?
8. When was the first really successful steamboat made?
9. How many yards are there in a mile?
10. What are backhanded letters?

Match correctly:

11. Penguin Island	Henry Longfellow.
12. Chaparral Prince	John Galsworthy.
13. The Rivals	Anatole France.
14. The Forsyte Saga	Richard Sheridan.
15. Paul Revere's Ride	O. Henry.

Answers to today's test:

1. William Pitt. 2. Because of the difference between his small stature and his great intellect. 3. Louis XVI. 4. 1272 I. Philip II. 6. Runnymede, England. 7. Anything from which the body may obtain its substance and energy. 8. 1807. 9. 1760. 10. Inclining to the left. 11. Anatole France. 12. O. Henry. 13. Richard Sheridan. 14. John Galsworthy. 15. Henry Longfellow.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Some of the crowd talk too much, perhaps you do, about experiences that seem more serious every time they are repeated.

Often men who are members of a fishing or hunting party tell things that happened that it might have been better to keep quiet.

If conditions were known they might not seem so detrimental to the object of the stories.

But when related, humorously intended, in the presence of a man's wife, they appear anything but funny to her.

Then there is the fellow who cannot keep to himself any narrow escapes from injury that a member or members of the party may have had.

Always in the future when the man suggests another similar trip there is objection from his wife.

Either she pictures him in a ridiculous role or as being subjected to injury or possible death.

"Too much talk" is generally laid to the women, but some men's tongues wag too often and too extensively—look out you are not one of them.

Isn't It So?

Stepping on the starter isn't all there is to getting married.

The man who deserves the most credit now is the man who pays cash.

Another of life's most perplexing problems is deciding which Greek letter society to join—if any.

The wise man and the fool seem much alike when they fall in love or try to explain hard times.
